

the Martinaire

From the desk of

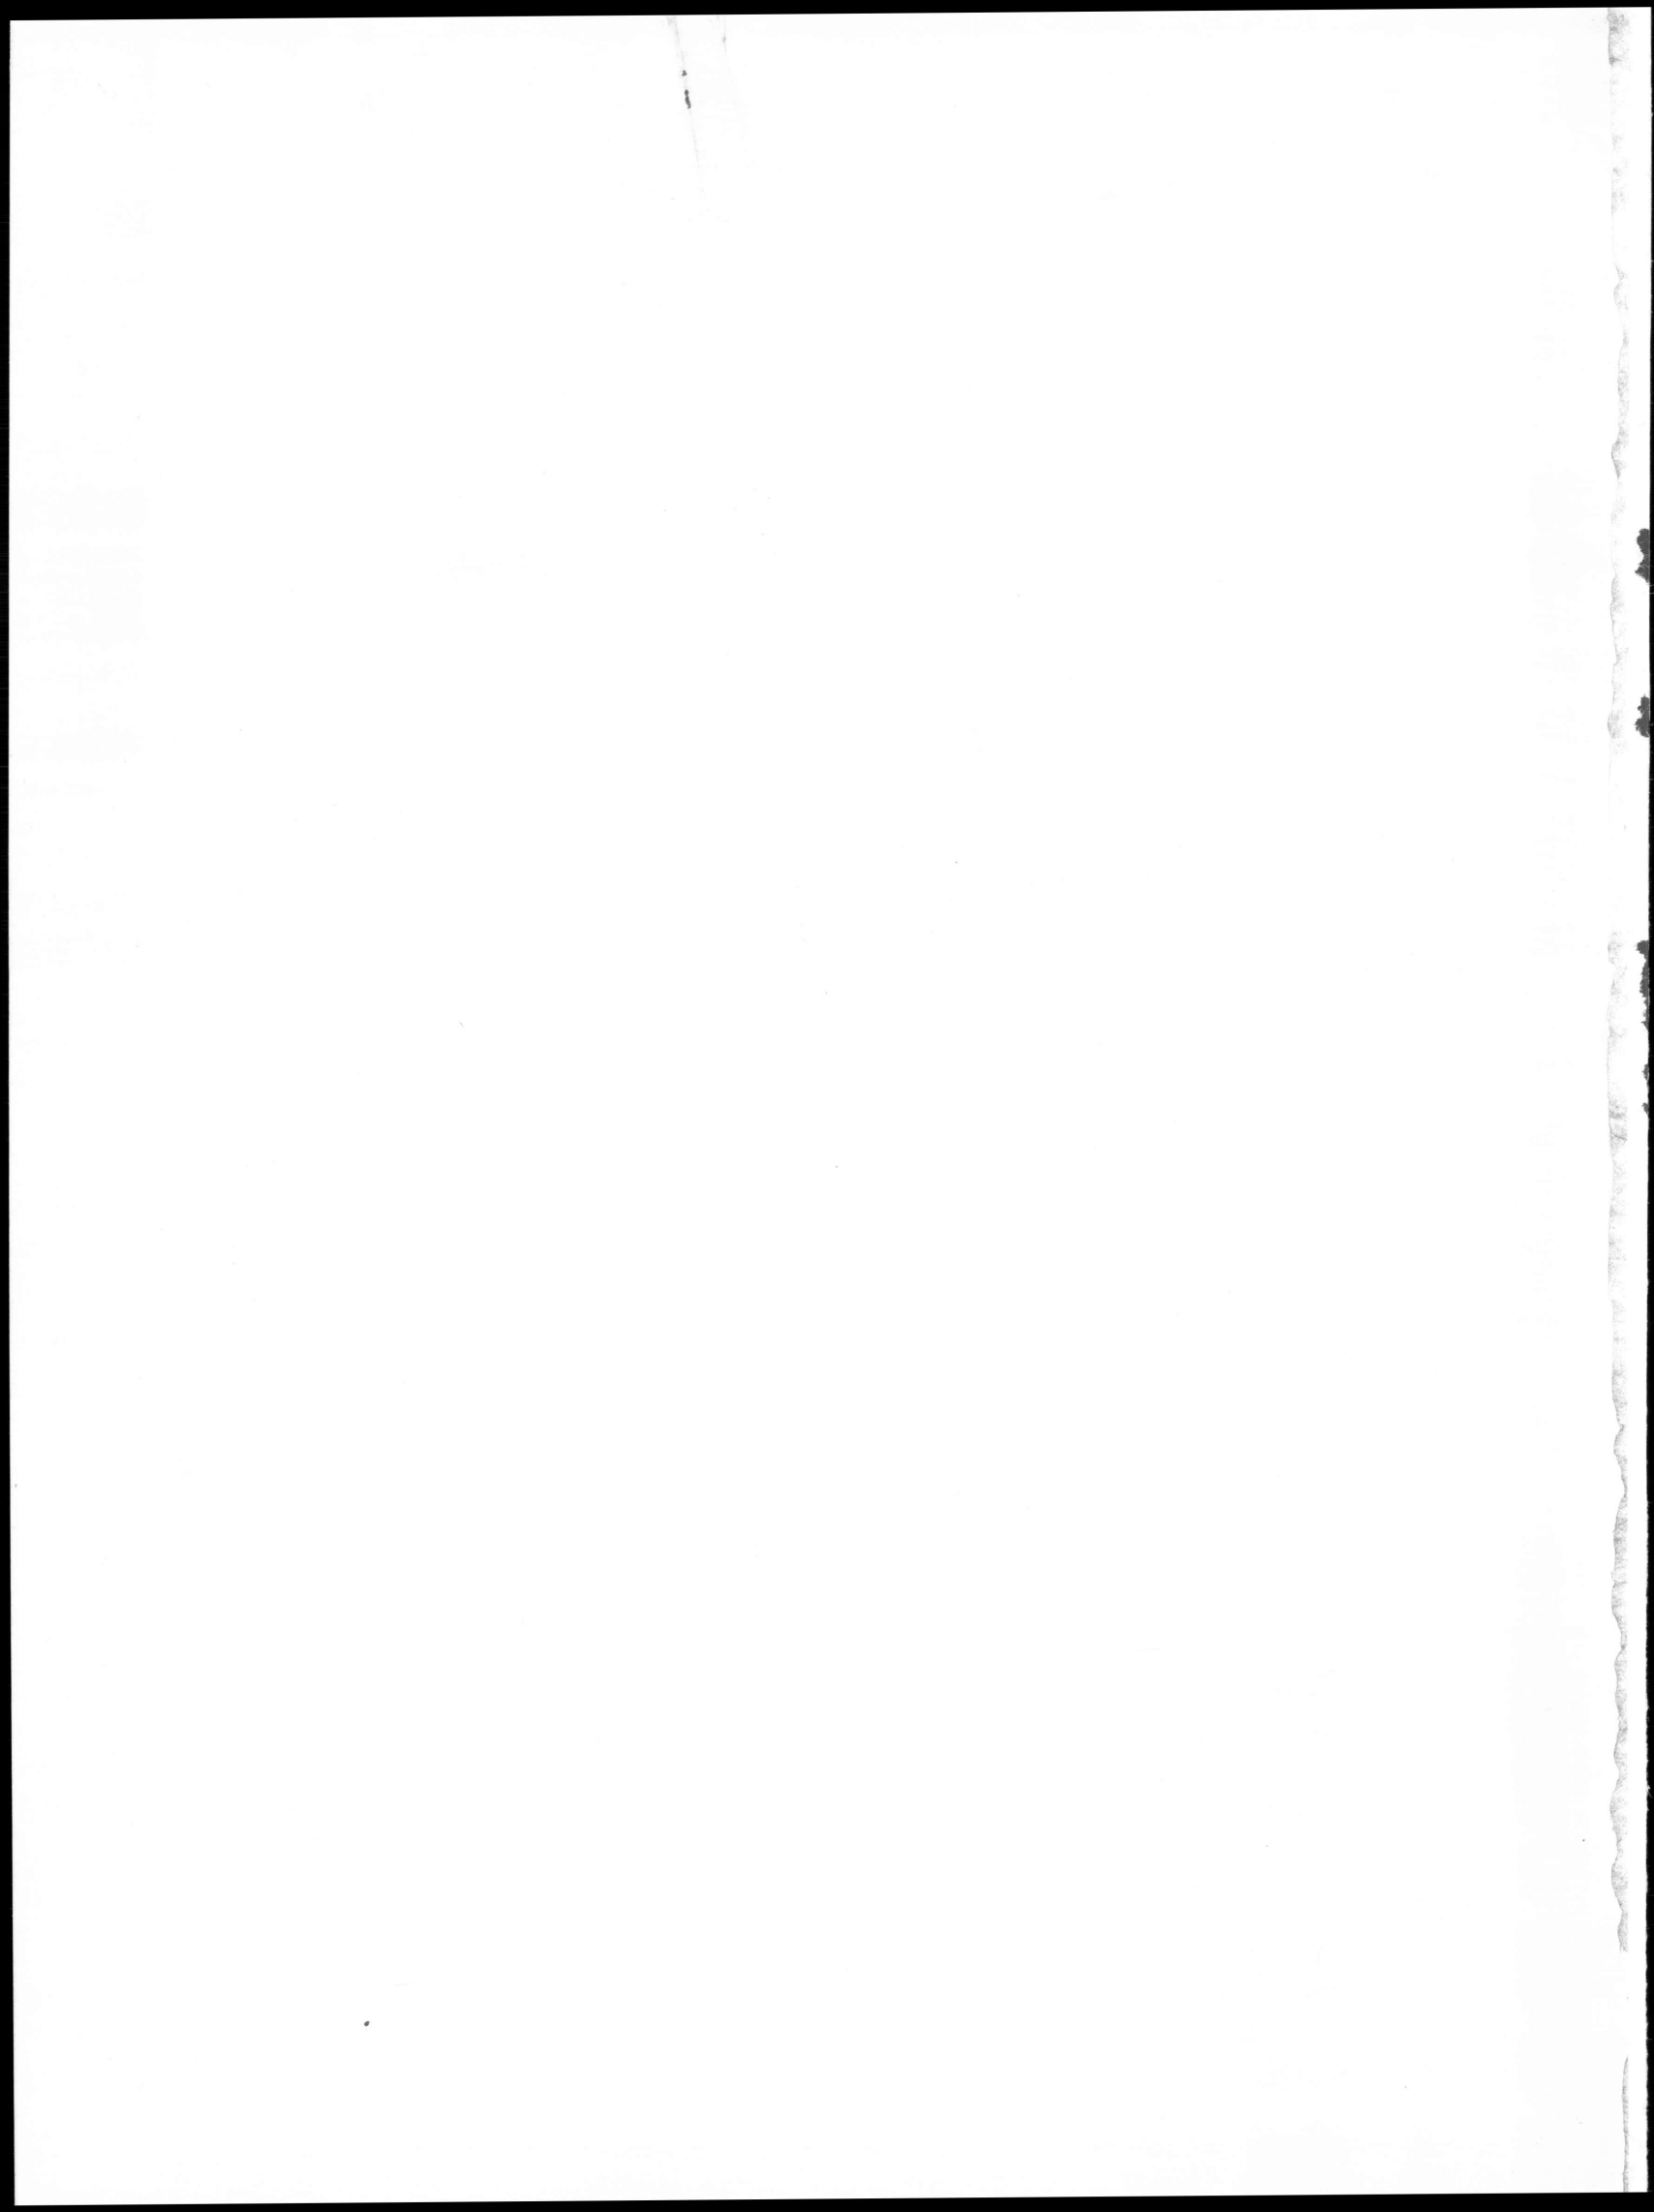

Bill M. Starnes

I have some good news and I have some bad news. The good news is that in most respects this is one of the finest yearbooks ever. The bad news is that, unfortunately, one serious error was made and that was on the Board of Trustees' page; as you will note, a number of pictures were omitted. I honestly do not know whose fault it was and it is too late to do anything about this year's publication. All I can do is assure you that it will not happen next year.

10. 10. 10. 10. 10.

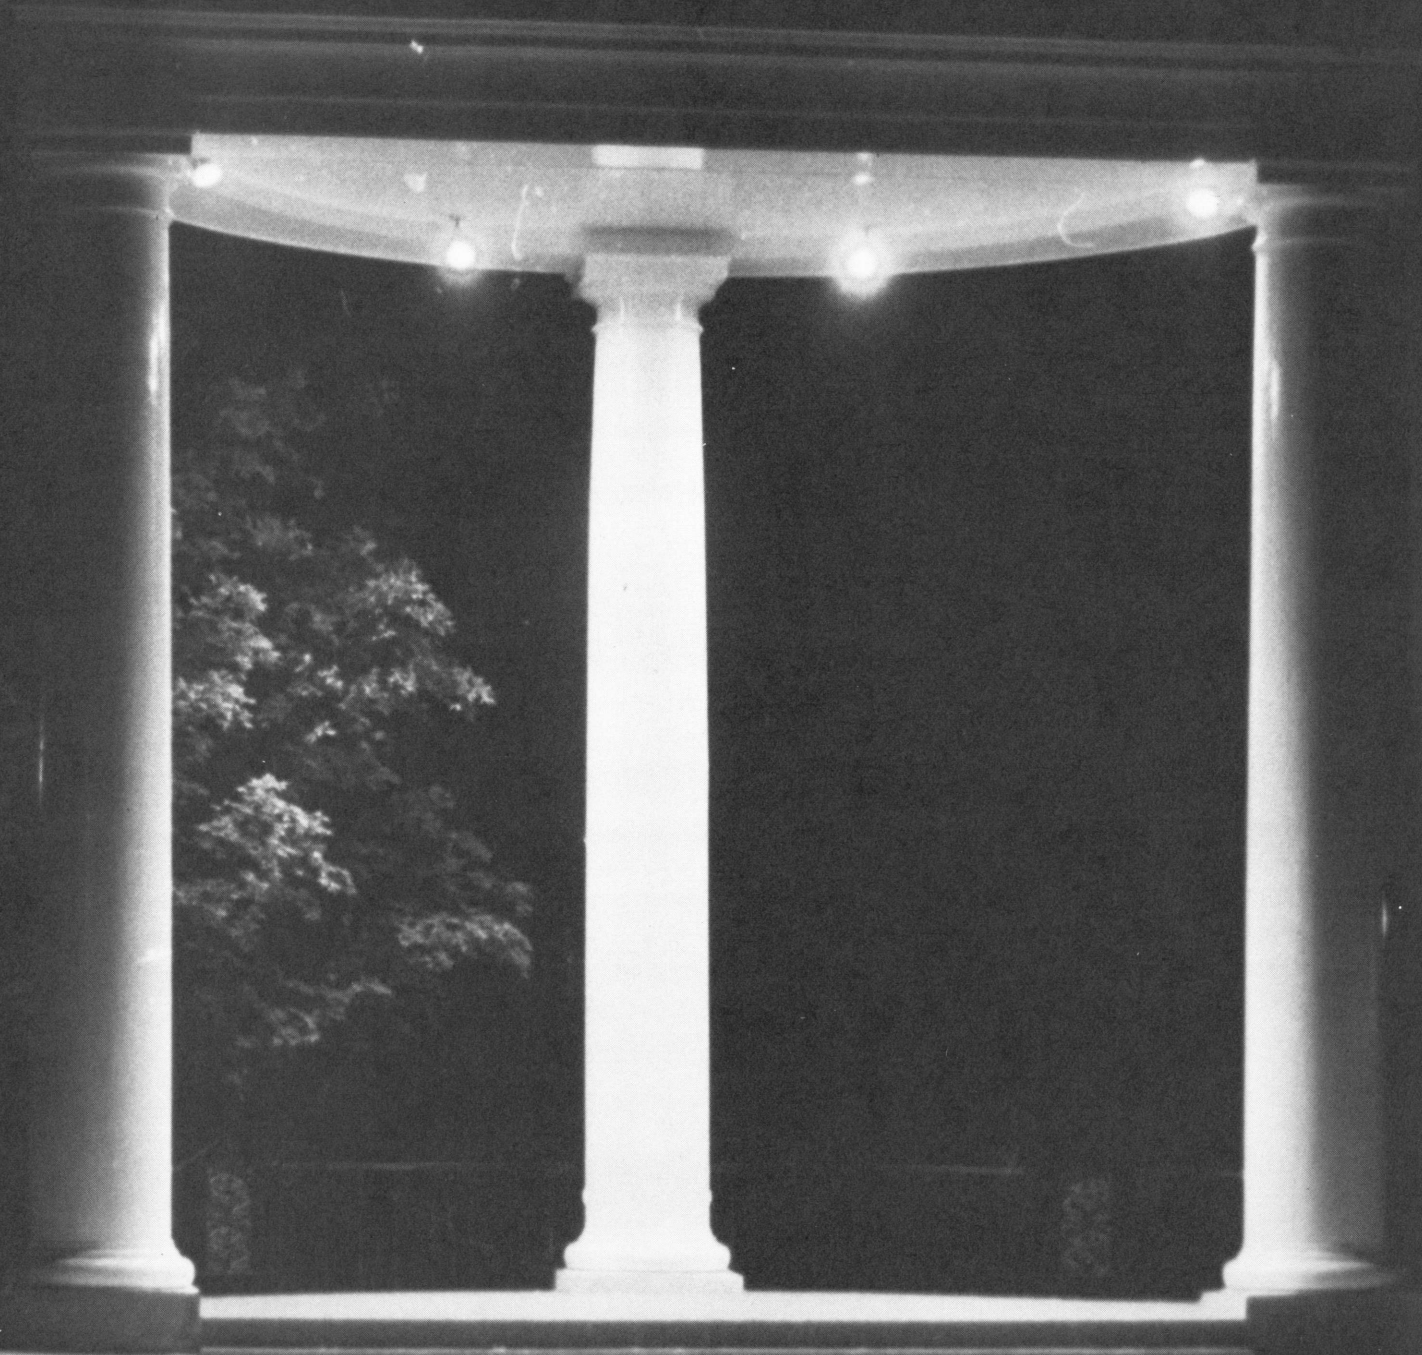

10. 10. 10. 10. 10.

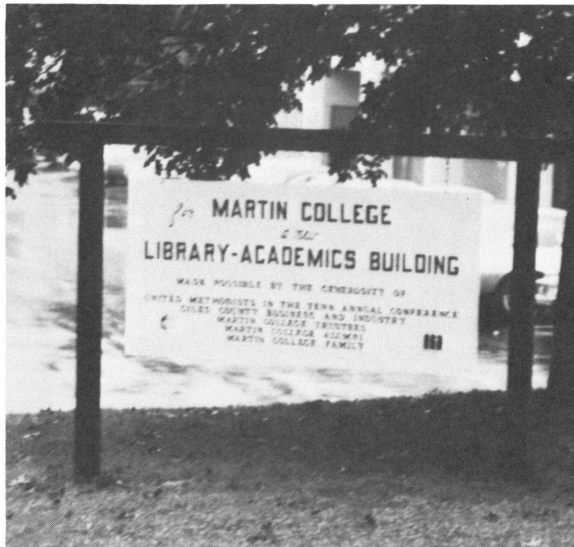

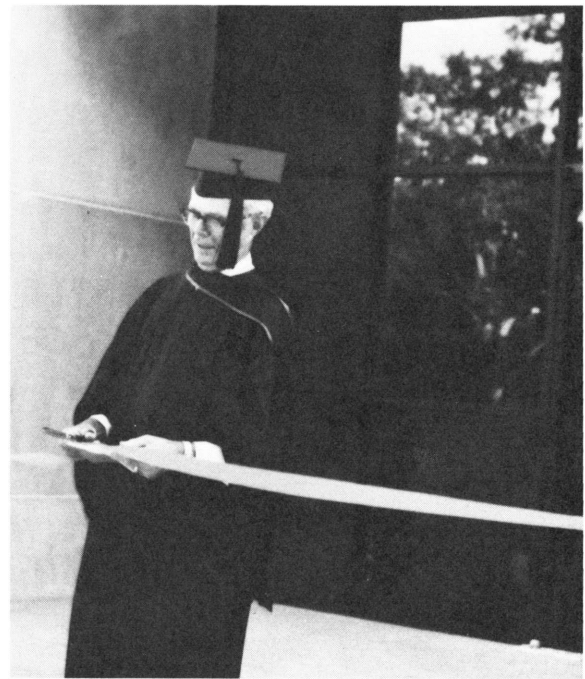

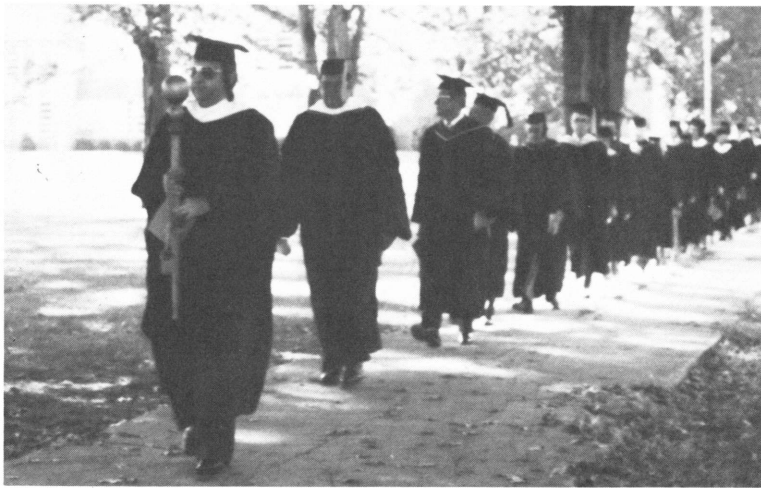

THE MARTINARE
1976

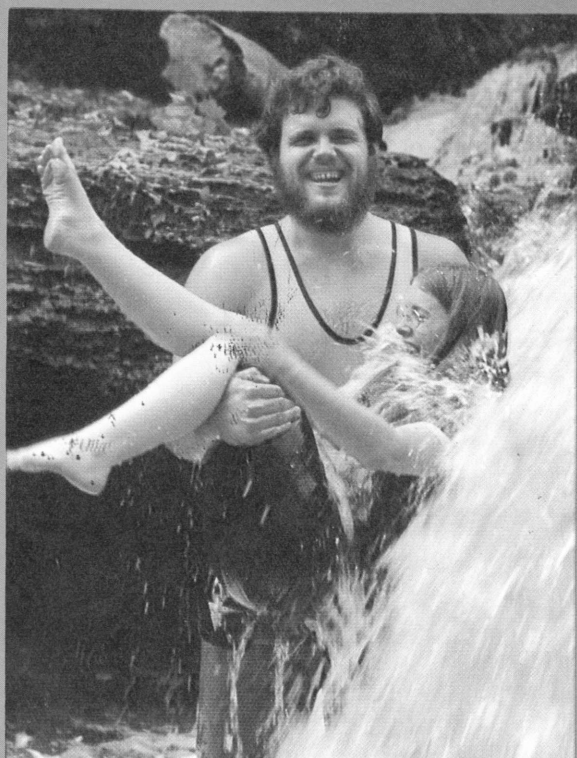

MARTIN COLLEGE
PULASKI, TENNESSEE

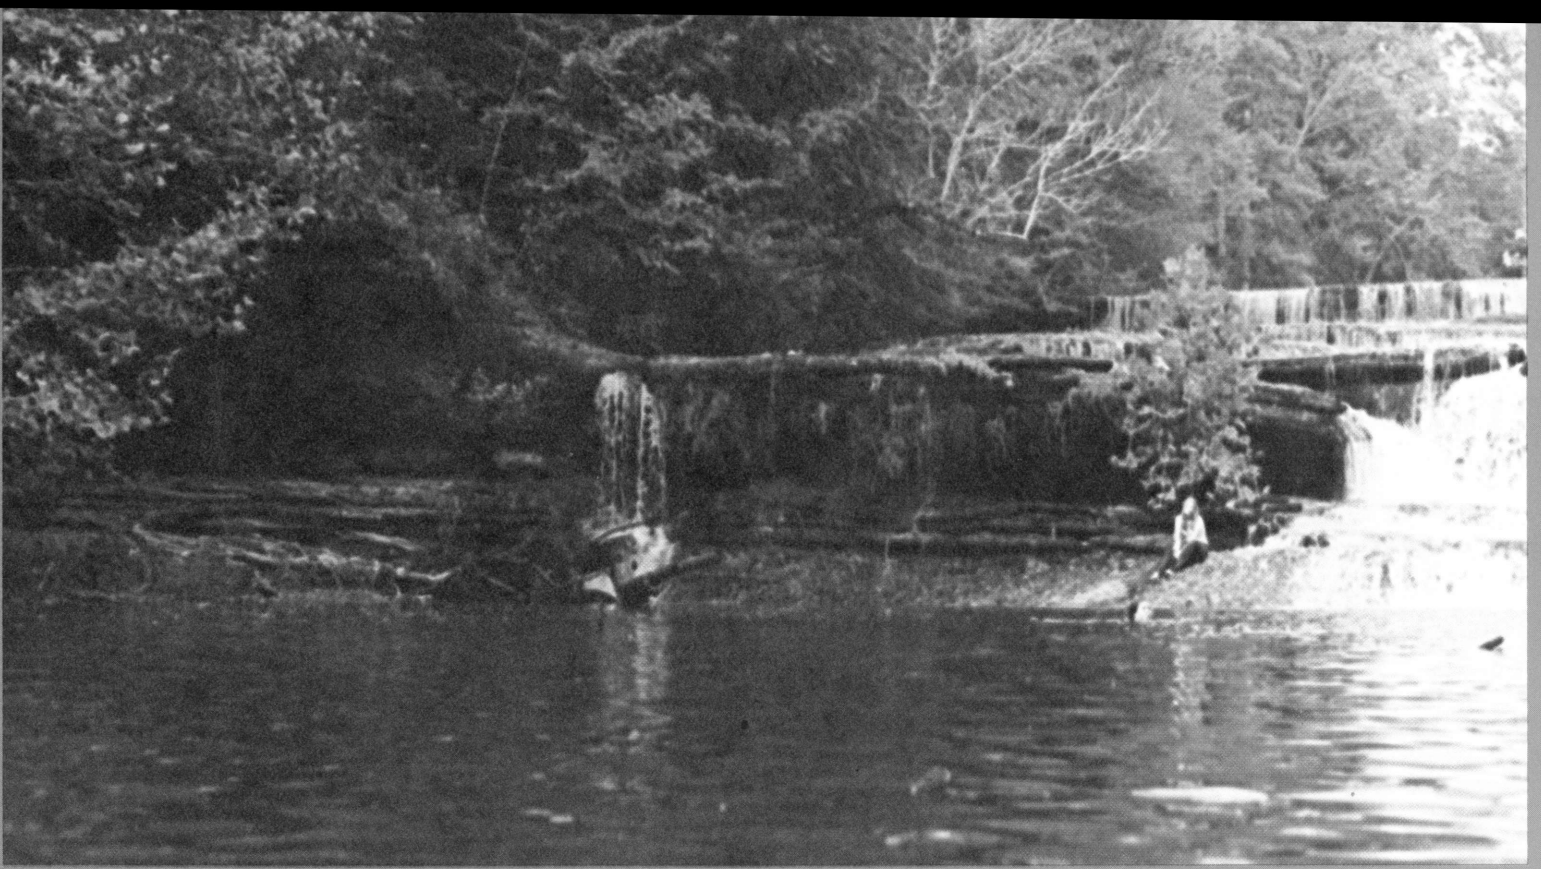

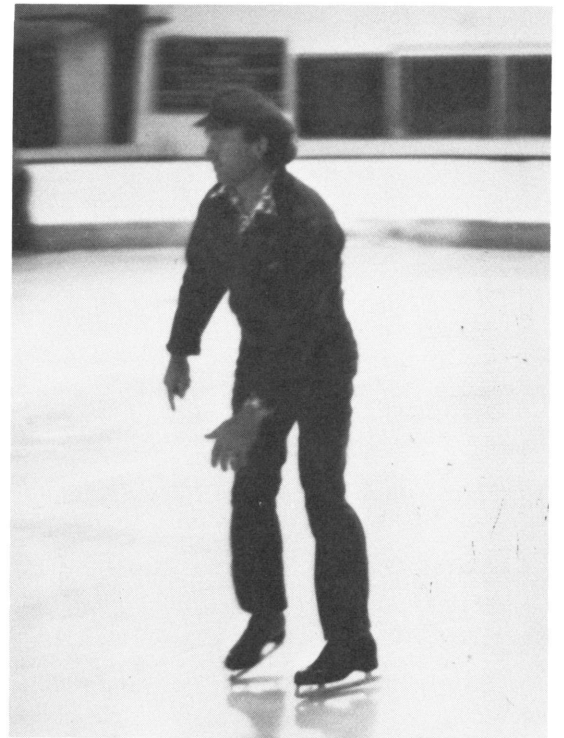

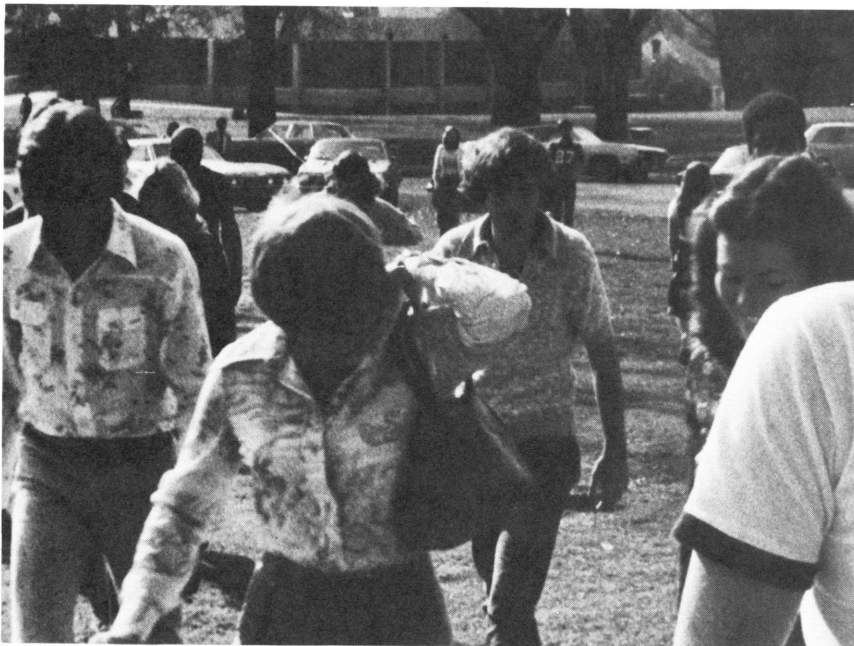

Yesterday . . . all things new.
 Tucked between the signing and standing in line
 Lies a soft gossamer shadow.
 Today . . . remembering the shadow
 Of the laughter and the silence.
 I forsake not the memories.
 Tomorrow . . . only looking forward to a past . . .
 Only looking back - a dedication
 I forsake not memories.
 Yesterday, today, and tomorrow.
 I forsake not memories.

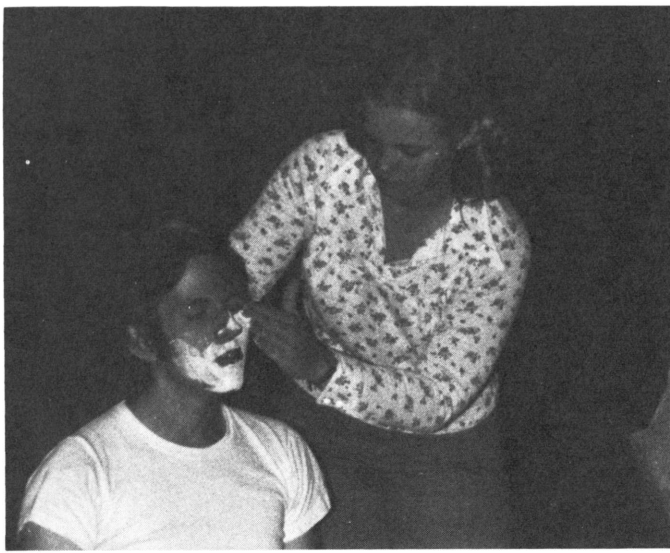

Beginnings . . . yesterday's shadow.
We begin, said the philosopher,
Not with the pensive frown,
But with a childish and good-hearted laugh.
Play . . . pretend . . . be.
I forsake not memories.

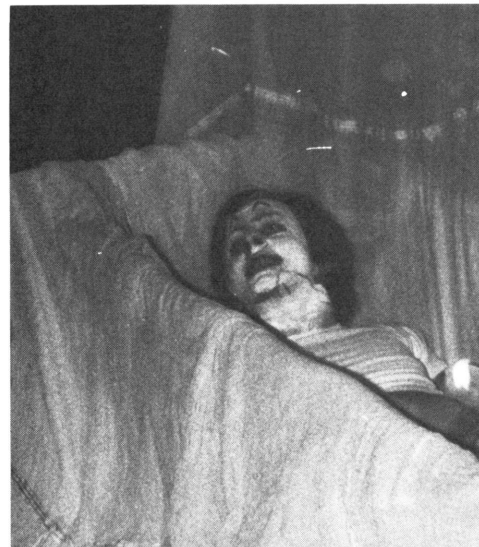

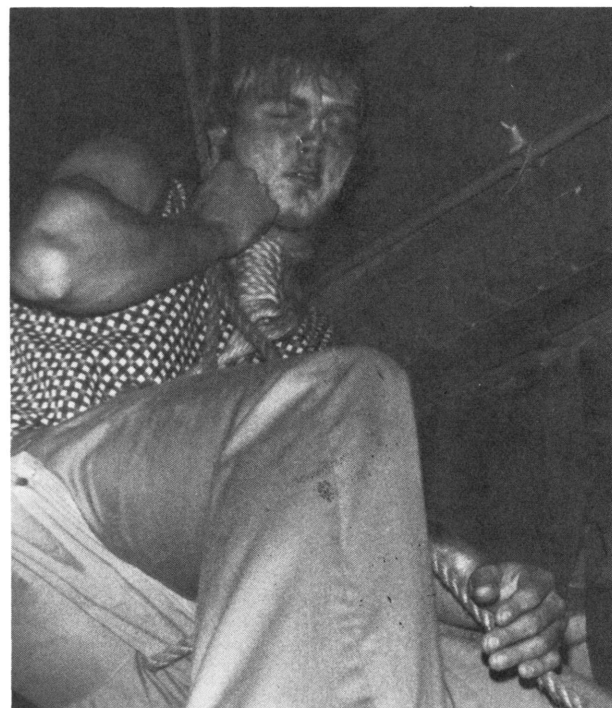

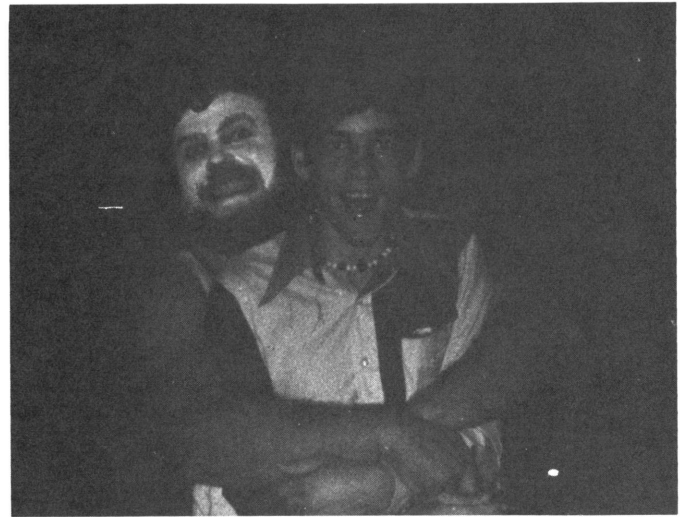

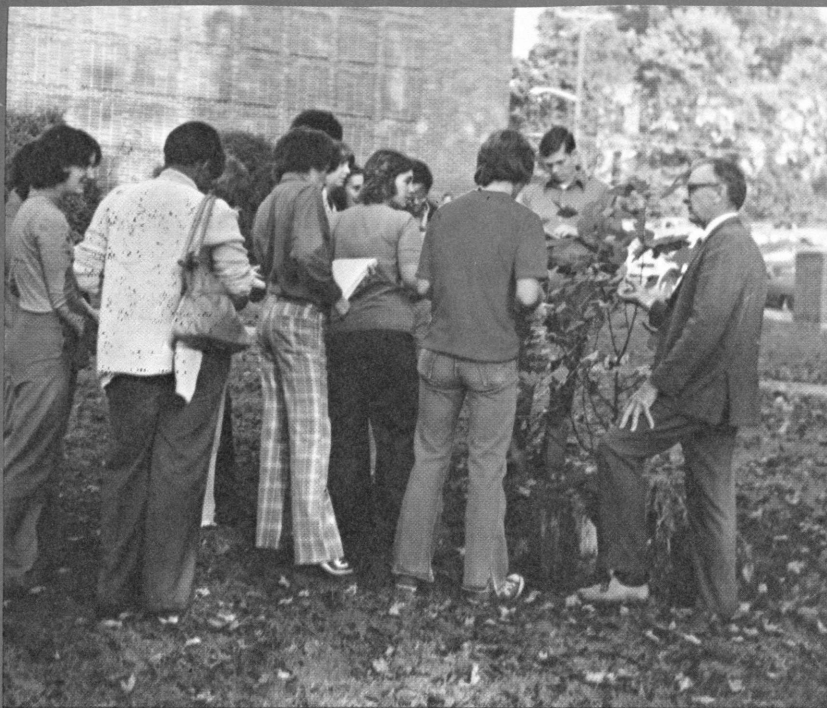

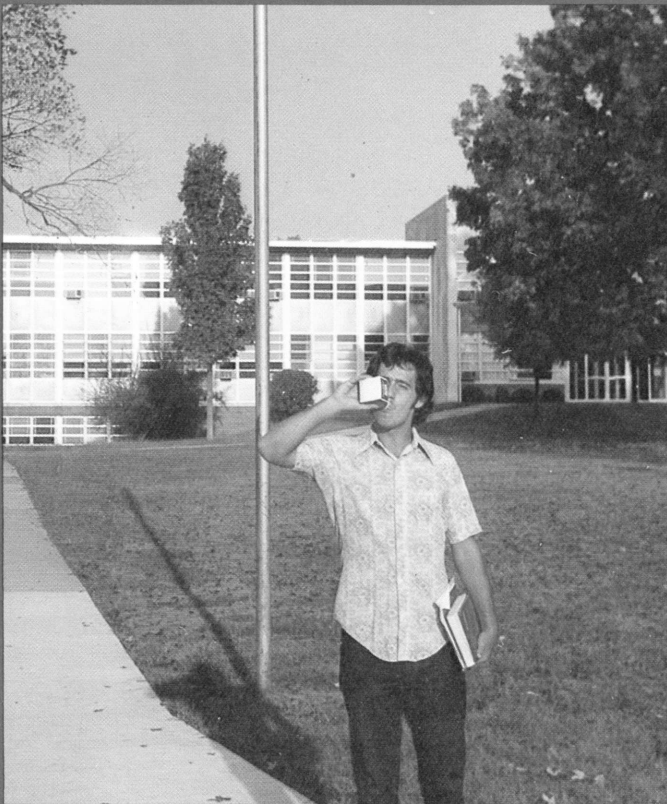

Learning is only growing,
and growing only becoming.
Today is yesterday's aspiration and tomorrow's remembrance.
Becoming today . . . becoming wiser,
by touching,
By seeing, by doing,
I touch the world around me;
It moves . . .
And catches my soul.

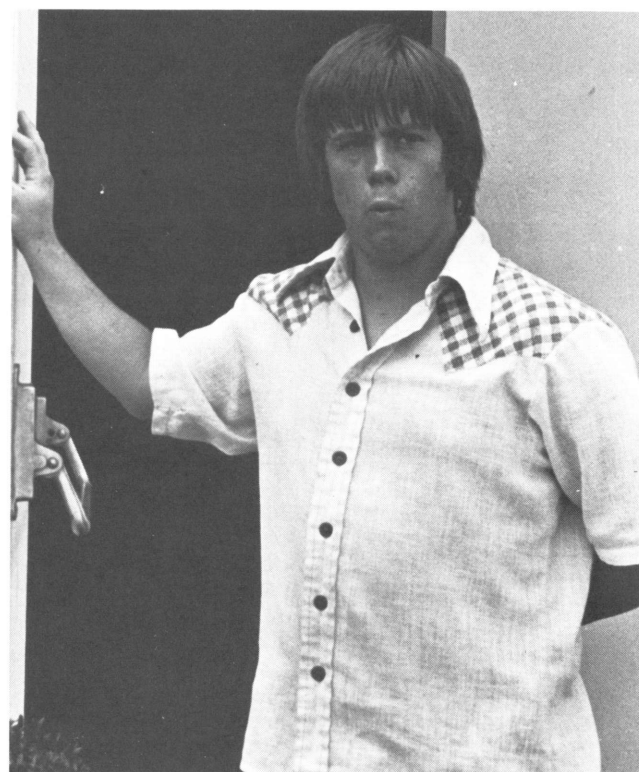

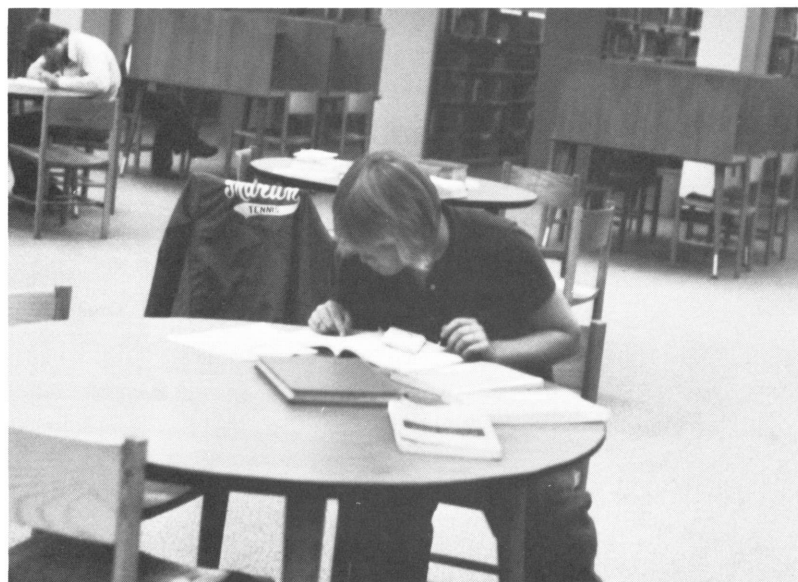

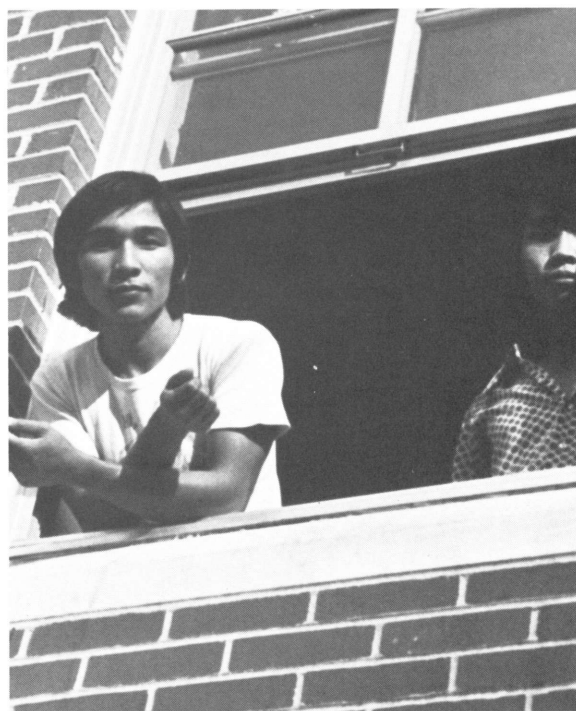

Laid between the planning and doing
Is the being . . . a lax hour,
To go, to talk, to learn, to play -
Not to speak of man's society,
But to be in it.

On all the branching willows of my life
So many wanderers have I seen and been.
I saw my yesterdays flowing as a stream
Over stones of deliberation, oozing
To a vessel of an ocean of perception.

Tomorrow is the Nickell Picnic
 Eating time is about five-thirty,
 Come at four and have extra fun
 That is if the girls are a bit flirty.

Fellows we have some delightful paths,
 Up and down which you may parade
 If you've confidence in your partner
 And of her you're not afraid.

With the advent of Women's Lib,
 And the aggressiveness of her gender
 You just might hold your own
 Then again you might surrender.

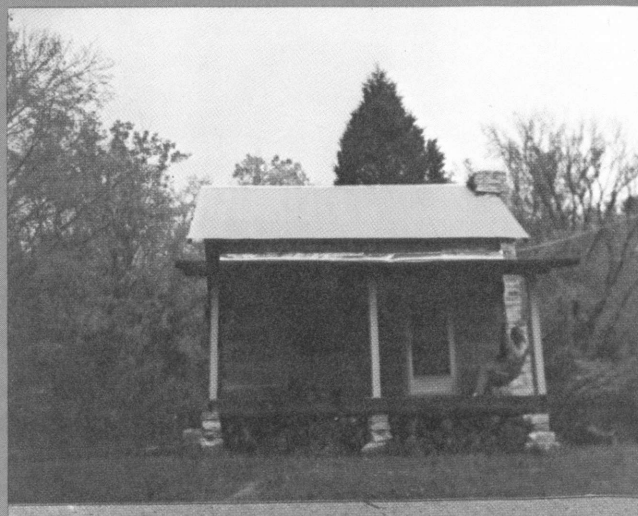

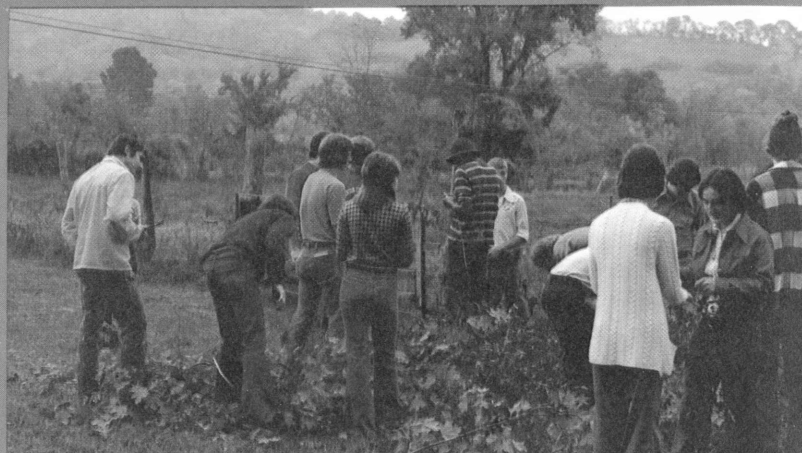

Take the path to the top of the hill
 From here there is a beautiful scene.
 Here you see most of Buchanan Valley
 Which is peaceful and serene.

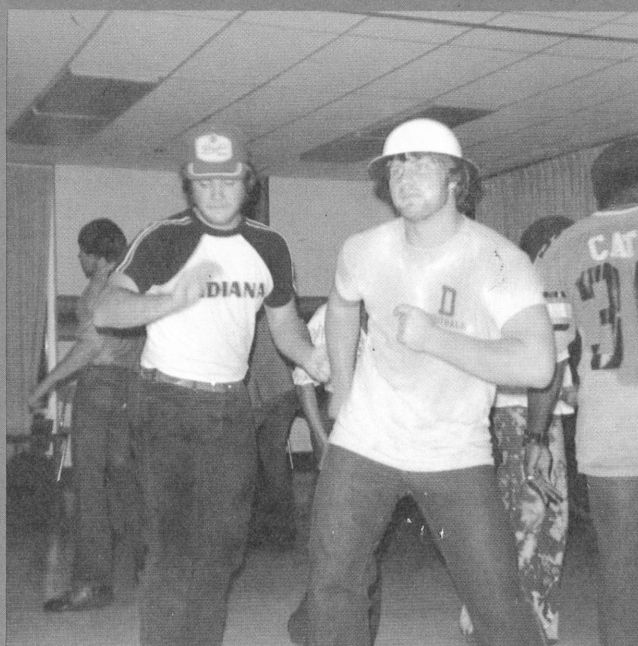

Supper is an enjoyable time
 With a weiner and a bun.
 If Mrs. Luker prepares enough food
 This is the time of most fun.

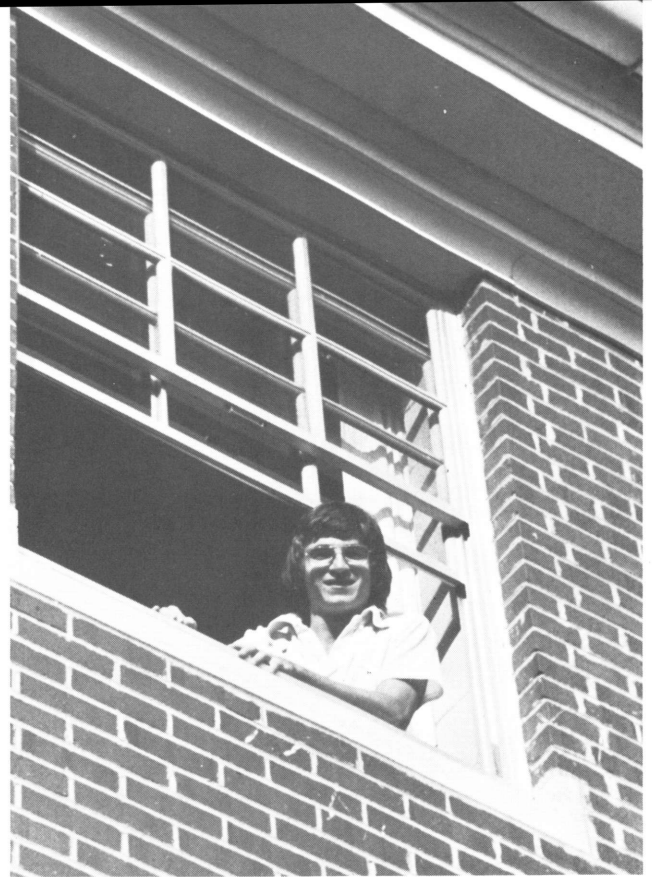

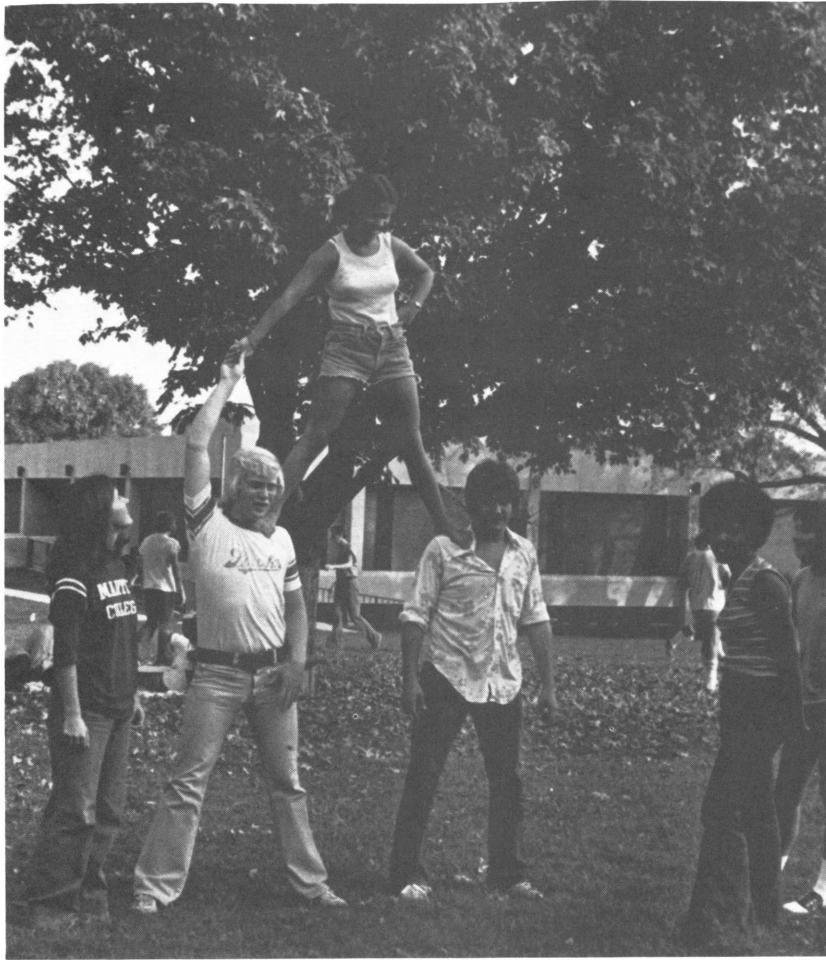

After supper is over and done
 And if the air is a bit chill
 You may enjoy Vesper Services
 Around the fire upon the hill.

Chaplain Taylor will lead vesper services
 After which you girls are to understand
 If you are equipped to turn him on
 You have my permission to hold his hand.

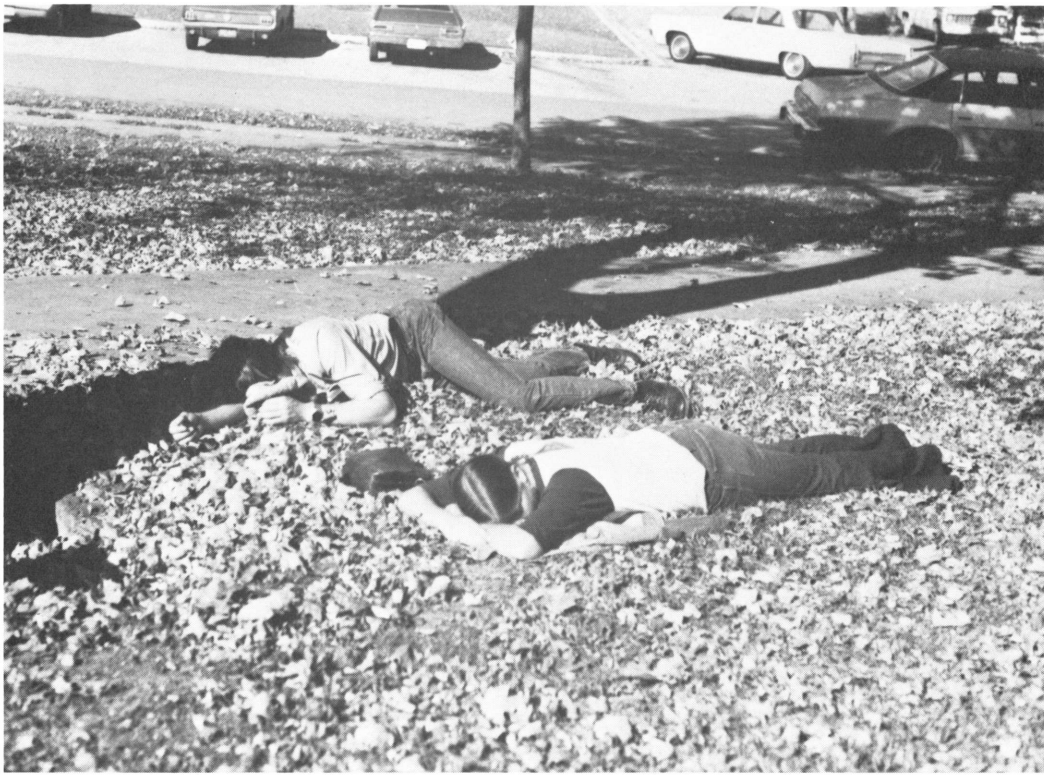

- Marcus Nickell
 October 1, 1975

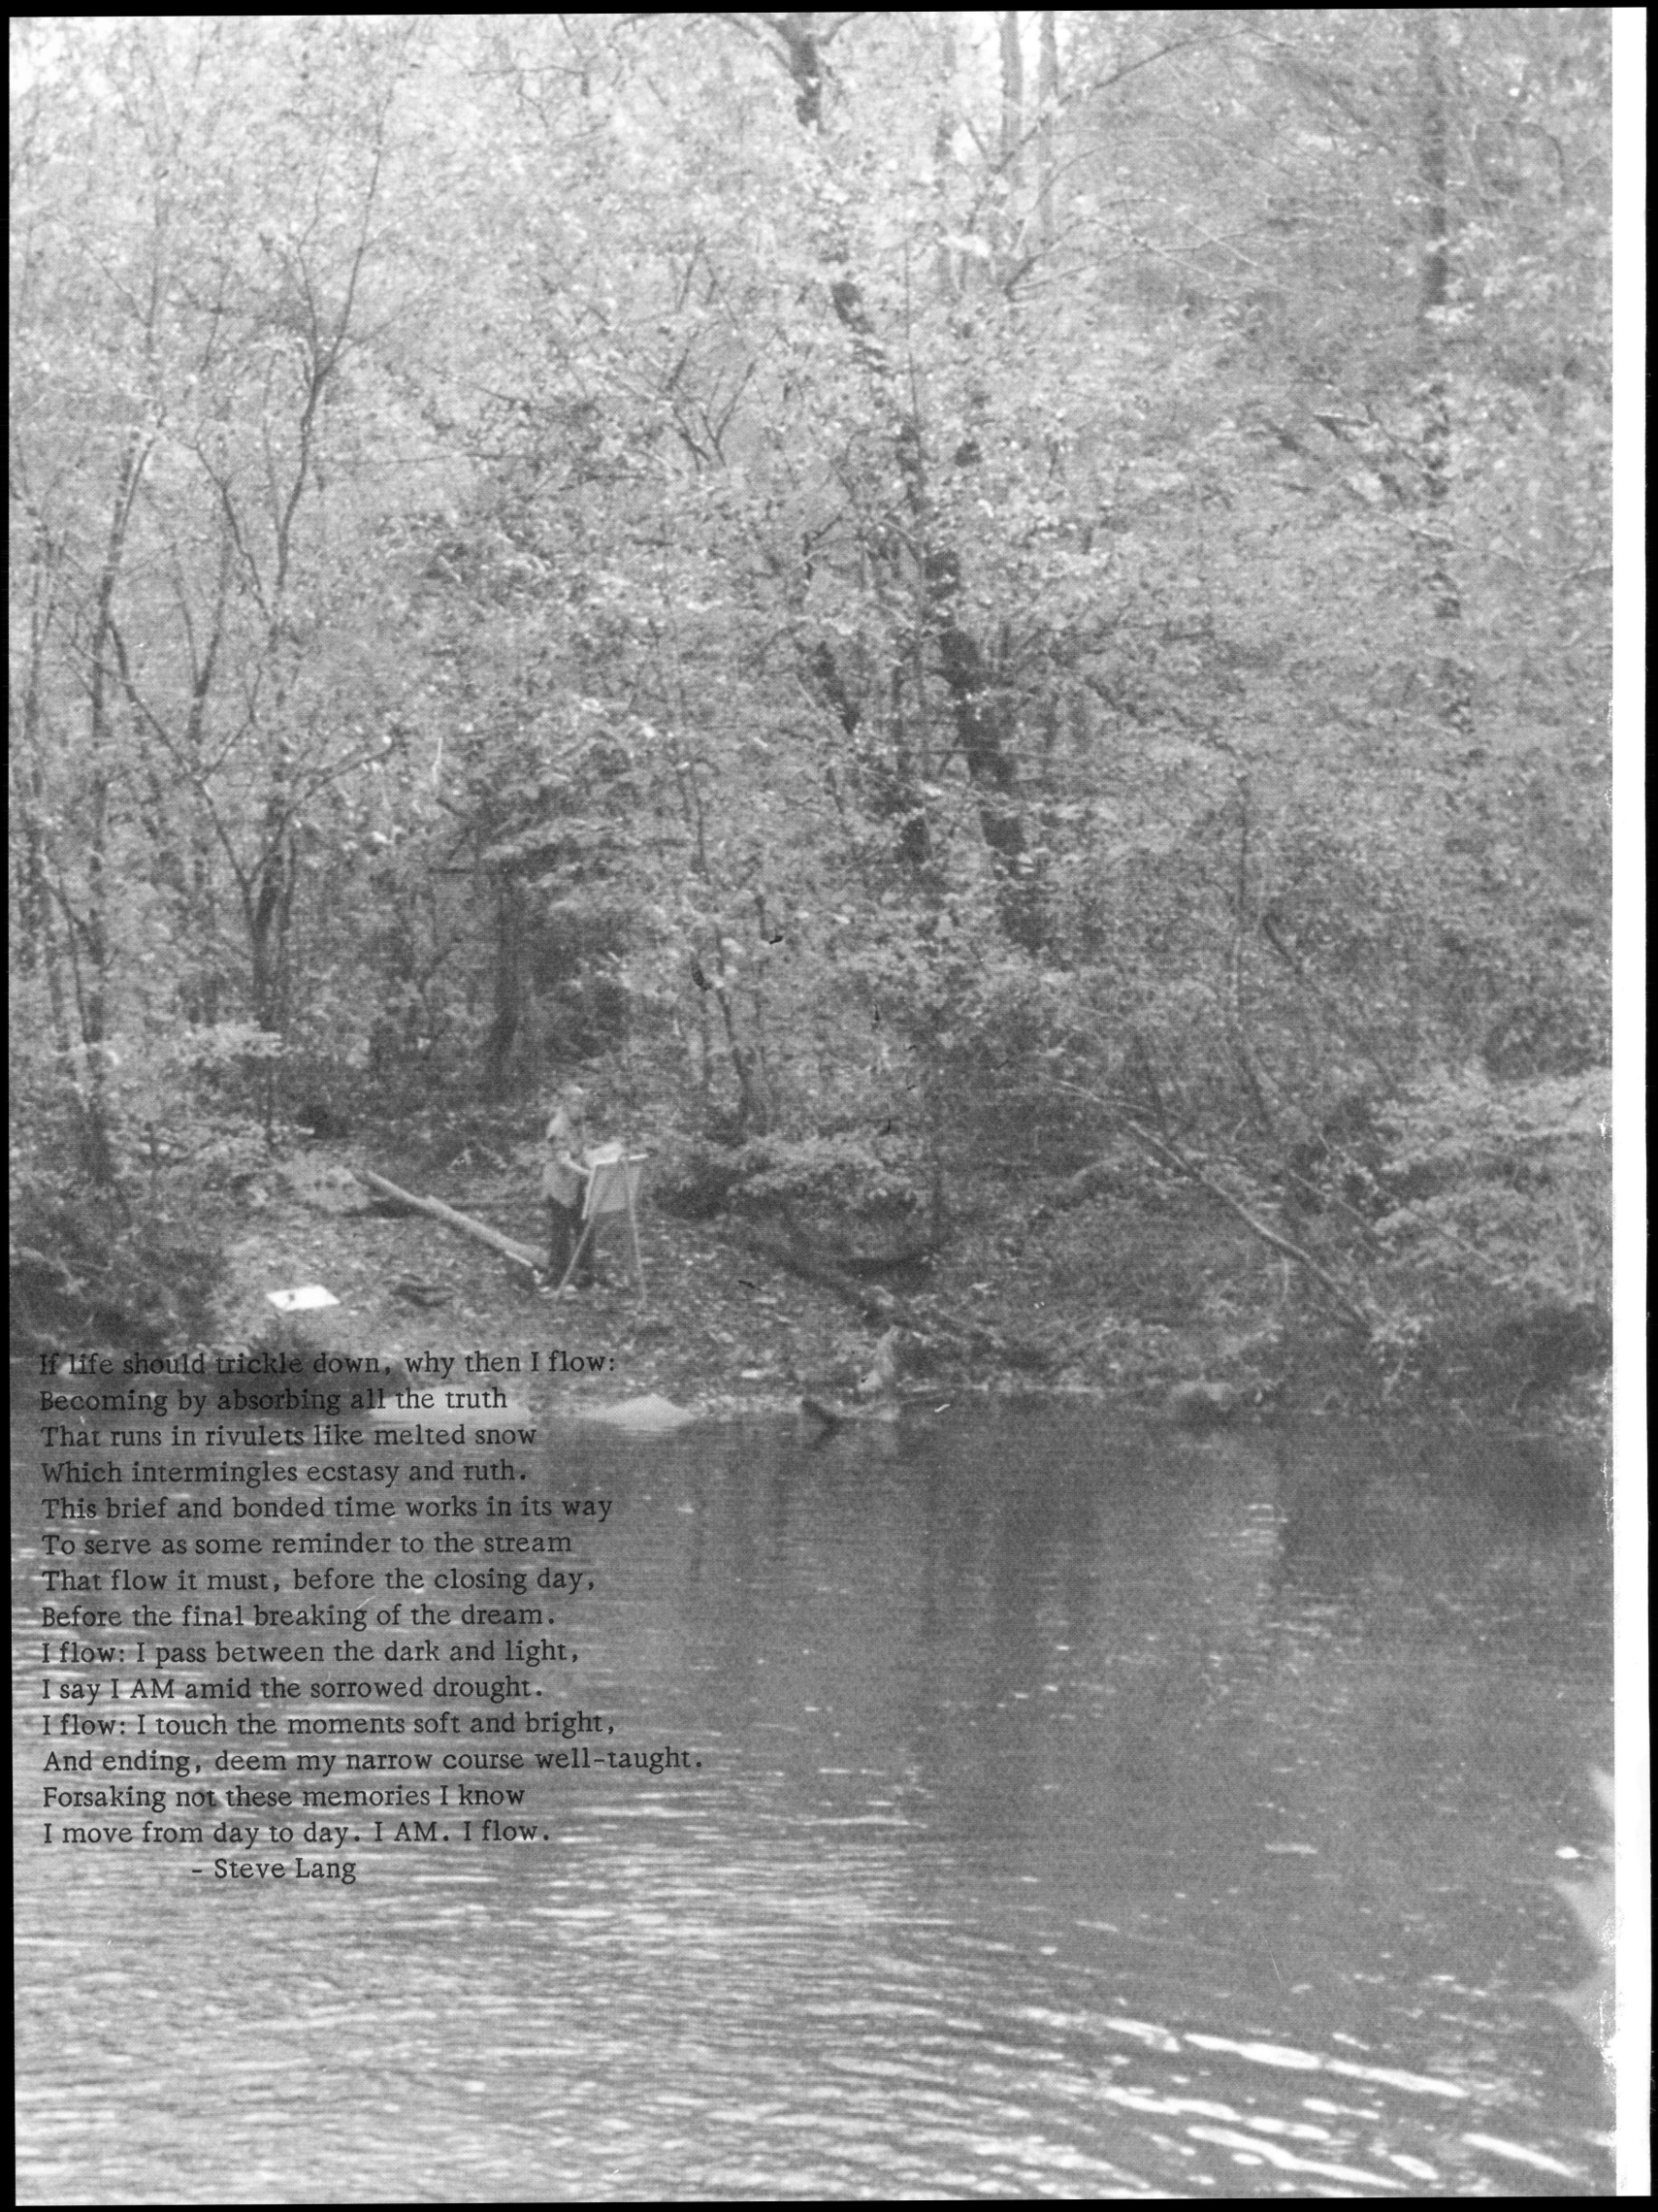

Being young is looking . . .
 Forward . . . prism of what will be Transposes one small beam into a rainbow
 Backward . . . on all the branching willows
 Of my life I have hung up such Flowered and fancied days.

If life should trickle down, why then I flow:
Becoming by absorbing all the truth
That runs in rivulets like melted snow
Which intermingles ecstasy and ruth.
This brief and bonded time works in its way
To serve as some reminder to the stream
That flow it must, before the closing day,
Before the final breaking of the dream.
I flow: I pass between the dark and light,
I say I AM amid the sorrowed drought.
I flow: I touch the moments soft and bright,
And ending, deem my narrow course well-taught.
Forsaking not these memories I know
I move from day to day. I AM. I flow.

This year's team returns four sophomores from last year's TJCAA and Region 7 championship team. These along with some promising freshmen should give this year's team the necessary depth in order to have another good season. At the first four singles positions and first two doubles positions, this year's team should be as strong as last year's. This year's team will face one of the toughest schedules ever for a Martin College Tennis Team. The blending of the talent supplied by four returning lettermen and the incoming freshmen should provide for an interesting spring for the Martin netters. - Johnny Jackson

Women's Tennis

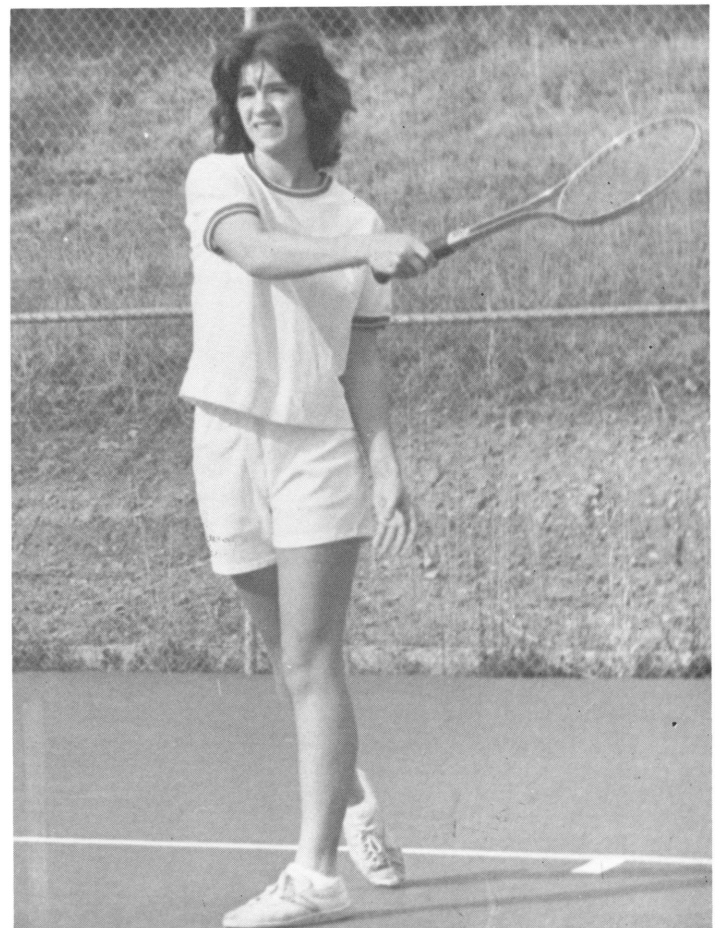

The Martin College Women's Tennis Team will begin their second year in TJCAA and Region 7, NJCAA action this year. Last year the team, which played mainly four-year schools, maintained a 7-6 record and won the Region 7 Championships of the NJCAA Women's Tennis Tournament. As a result of the growth of the Athletic program for women in the Conference, the team will be playing more junior colleges this year. The 1975-1976 Martin College Women's Tennis Team will have more experience, more depth, and more overall tennis ability. The tennis team is looking forward to a good year of tennis and the support of the Martin students.

The sophomores include Dennis Strobe of Bolivar; Nicky Hartsfield of Lawrenceburg; David Crockett of Ft. Smith, Arkansas; and Mike Green of Dickson. Strobe was the Tenn. Jr. College Champion last year with a score of 145.

The new members include Marshall Gilliam of Sewanee; Wayne Temple of Nashville and Allen Key and John Bill Dyer of Cookeville.

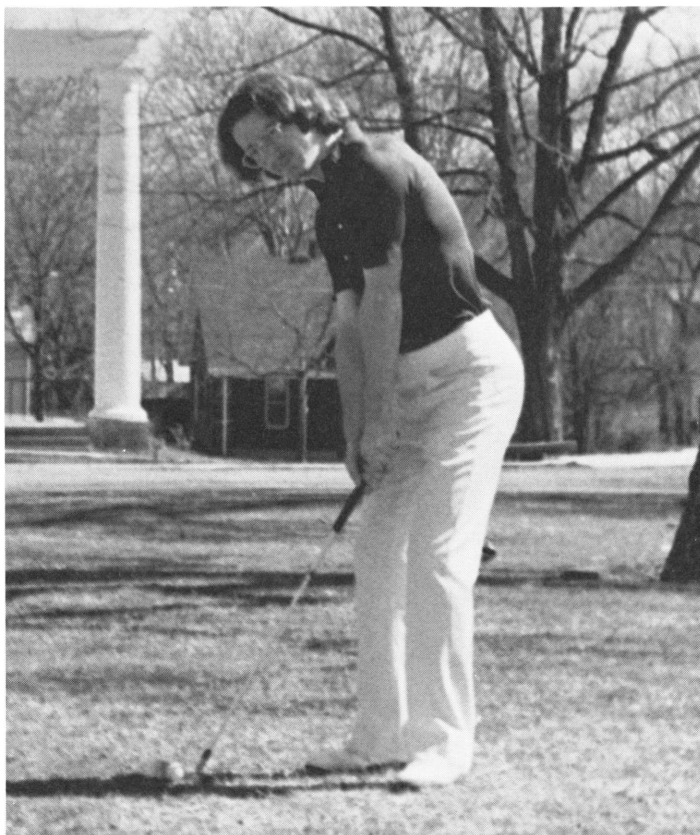

Martin had a regular season record of 14-3 last year. The outlook for the team this year is very good.

STUDENT LIFE

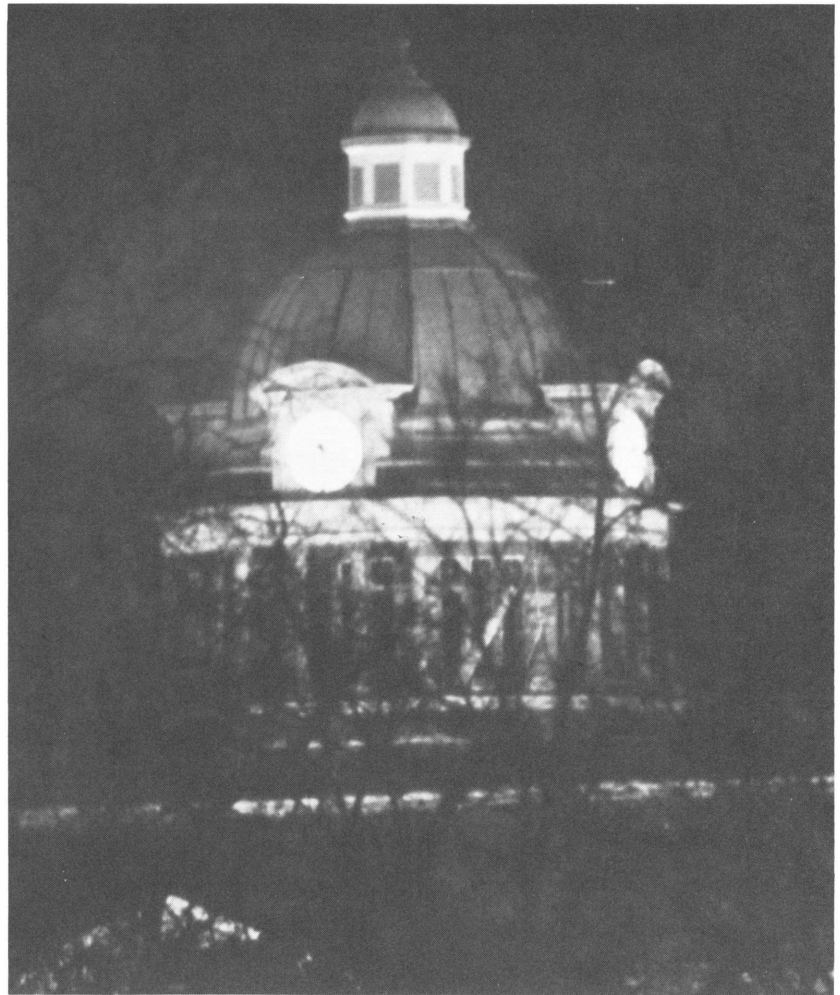

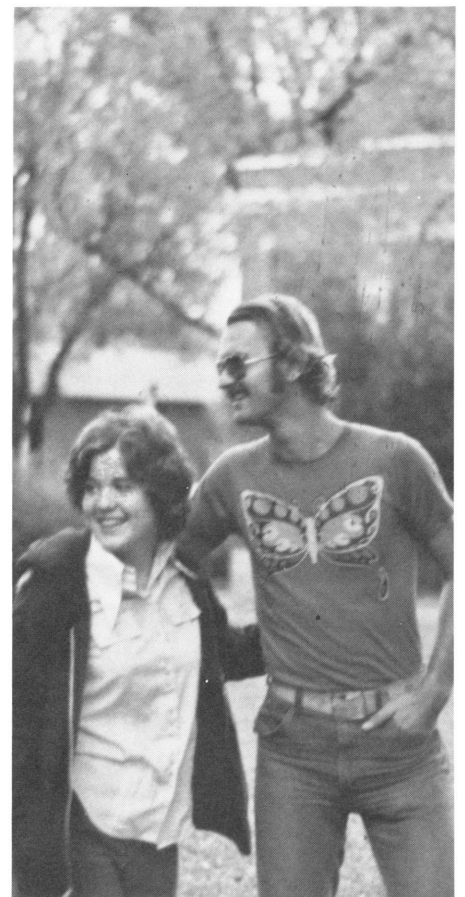

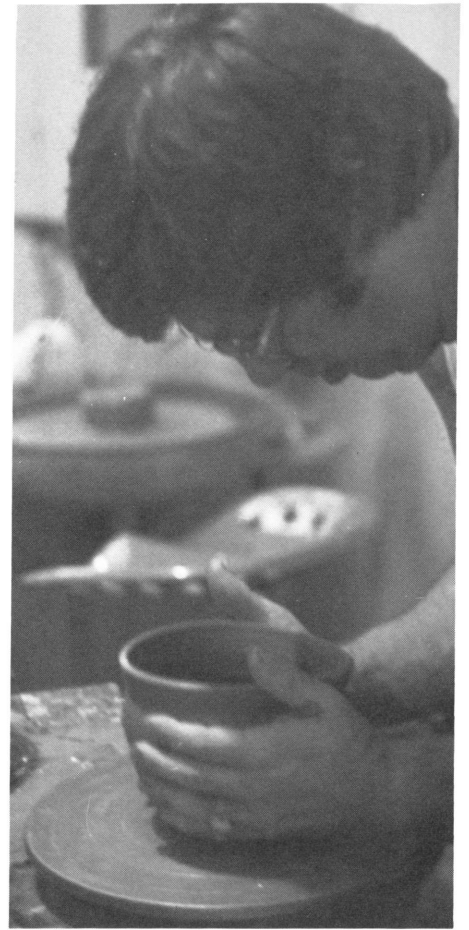

Remembering . . .
the shadow of the laughter.
Remembering the familiar existence.

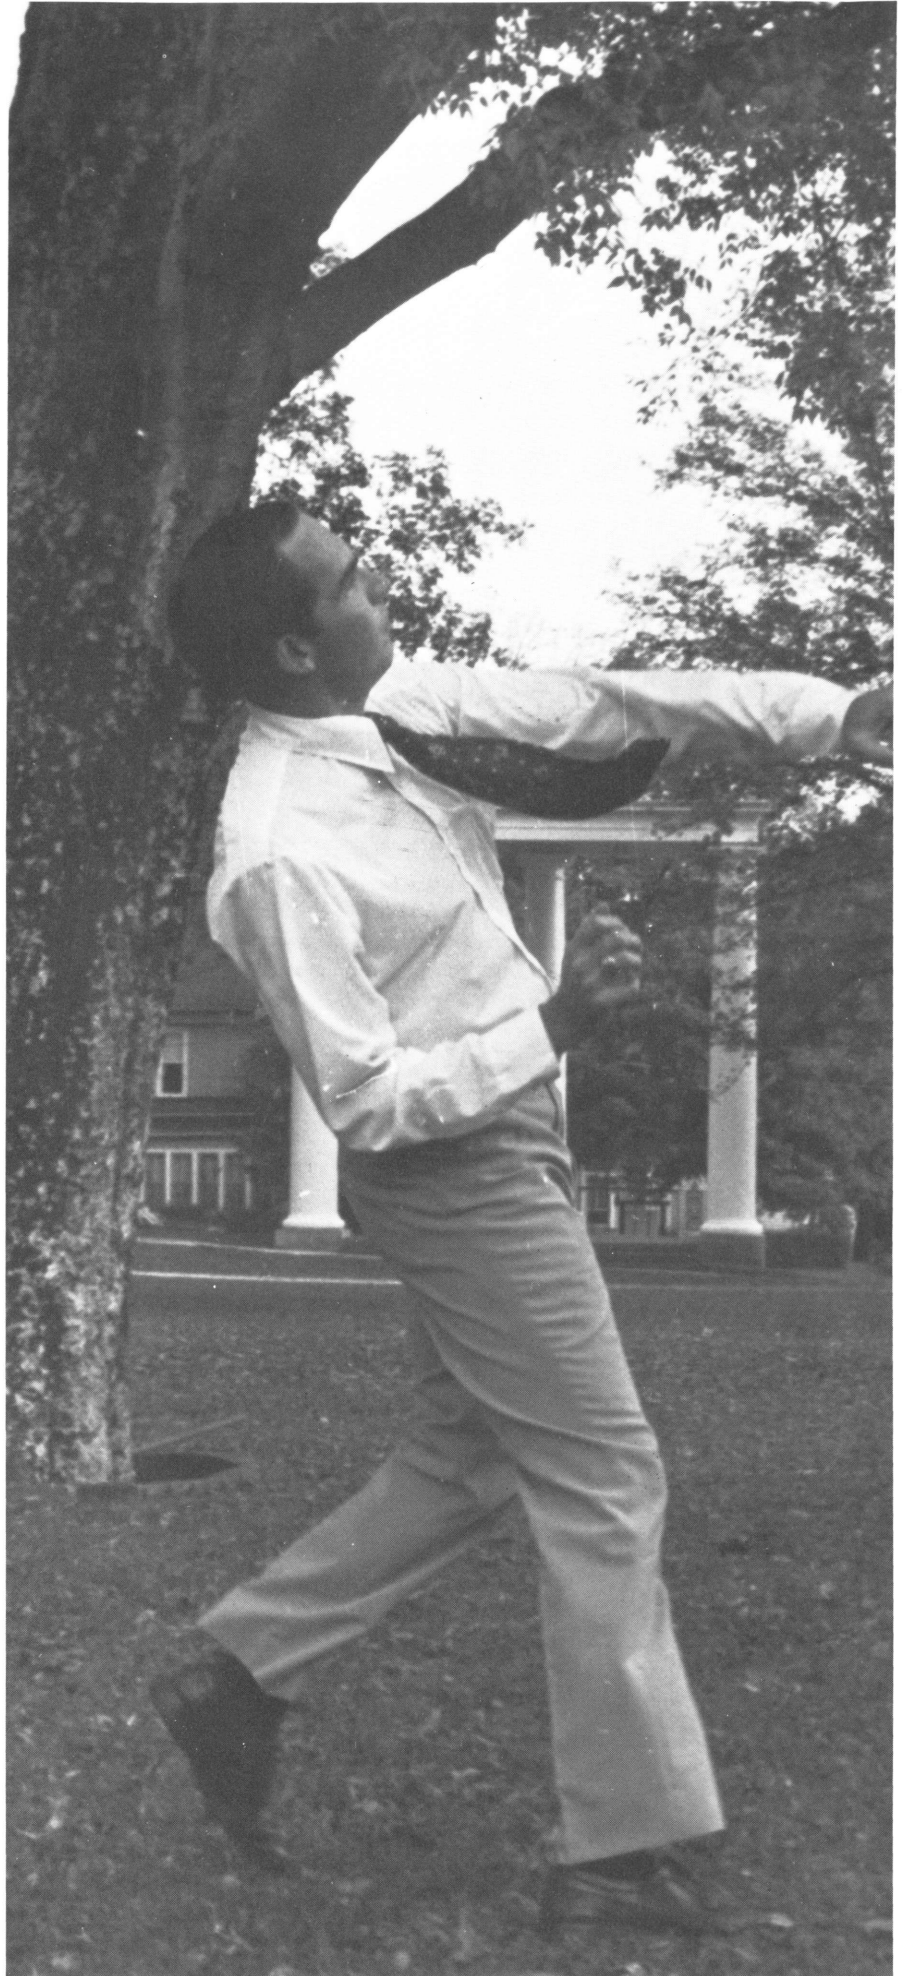

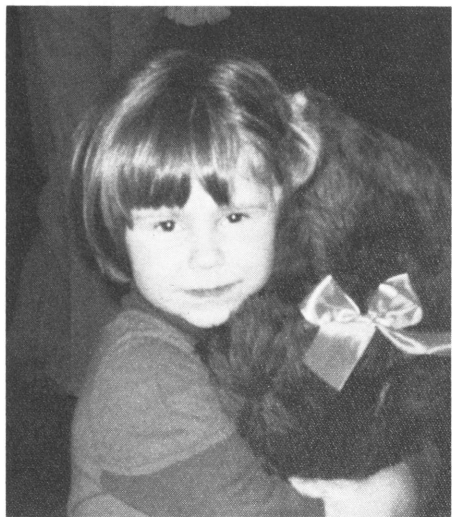

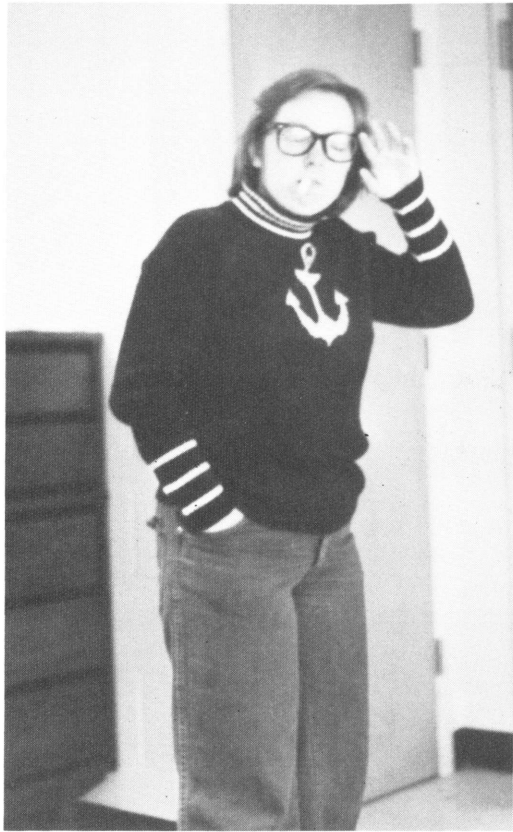

Remembering . . . the shadow of the silence.
There is that memorable quality in solitude . . .
a certain sanctity . . .
being one with God.

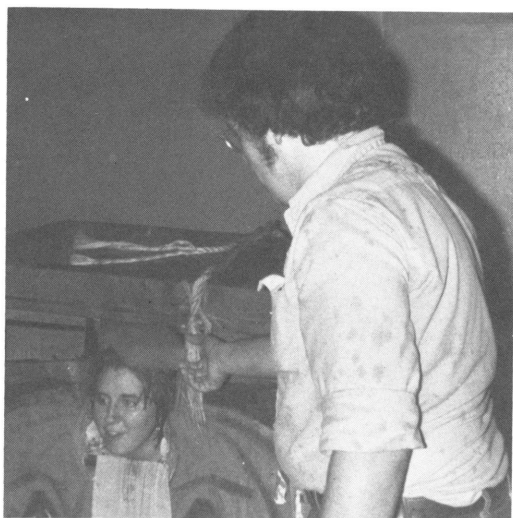

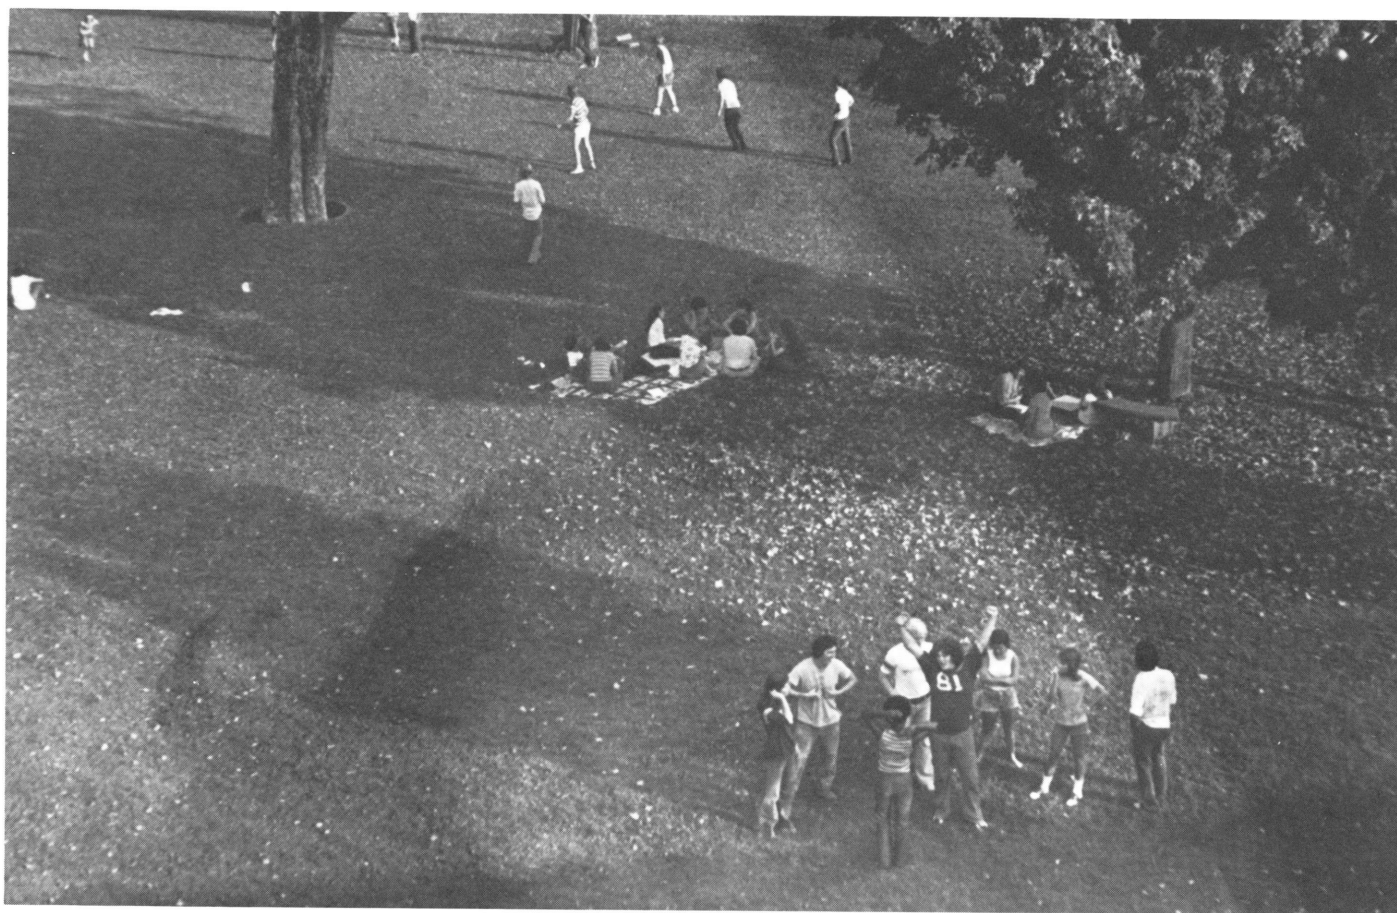

Yesterday I saw myself
in the stream's midst, caught up in rapture,
brought down to sorrow,
living from moment to moment
on the familiar existence.

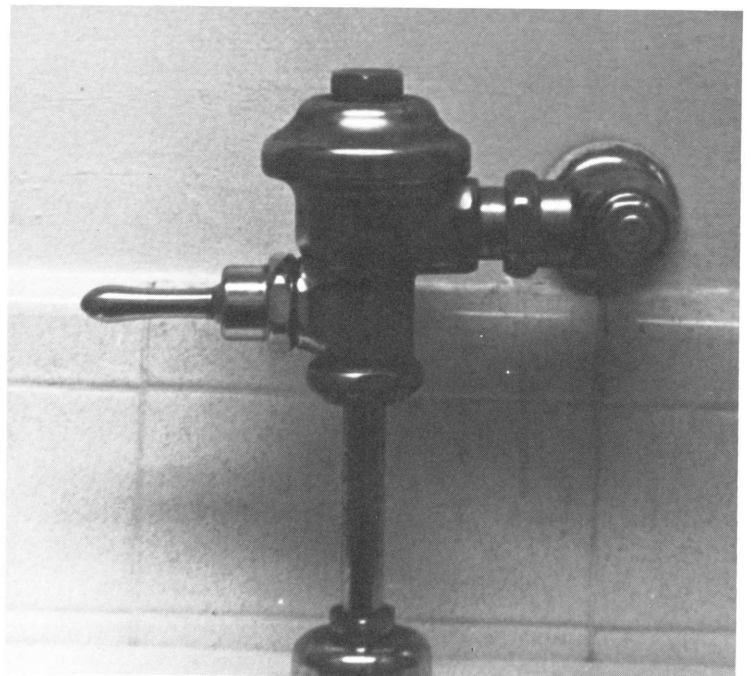

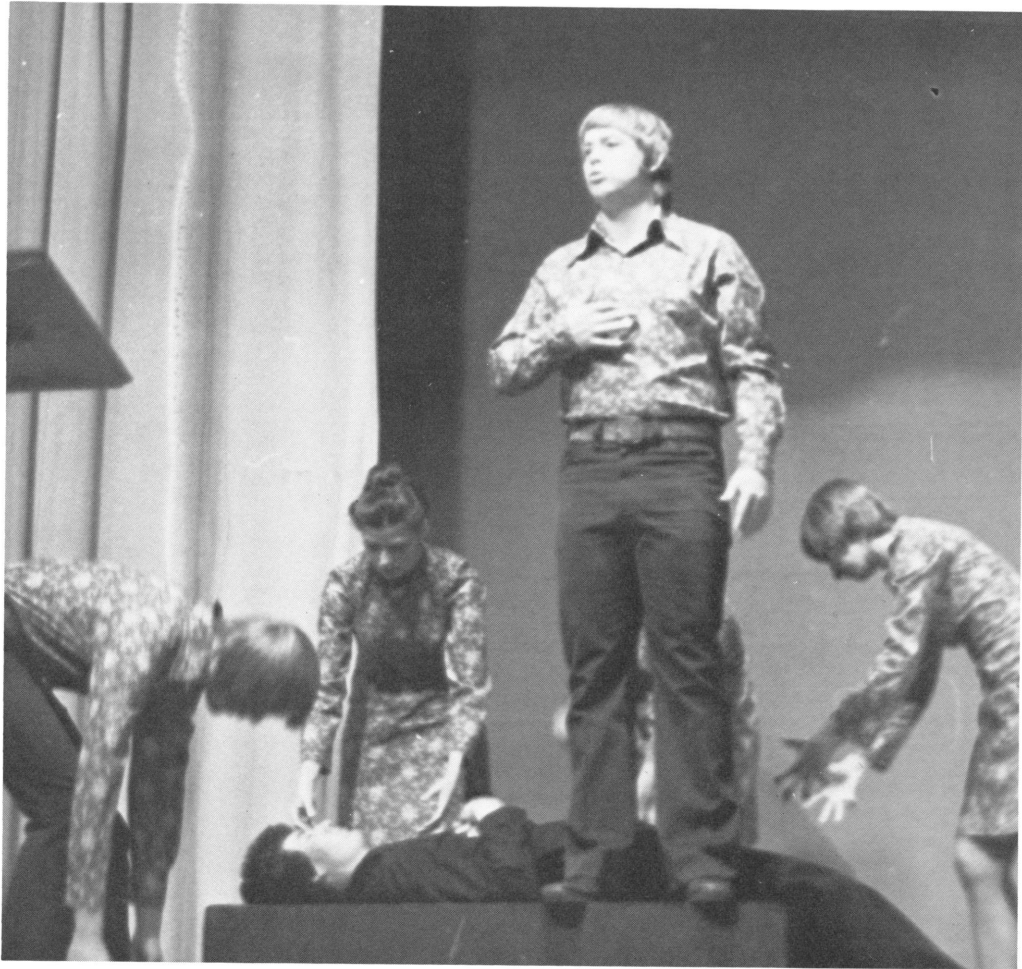

Today I show my natural piety.
In man's society I commune.
In the planning and doing
I act out my natural faith.

Tomorrow . . . will I grow, become more wise and less joyous?
Or will the foolishness
follow with age,
and maybe softly mellow?

Joy . . . I heard the same old melody with new words, a small grace note
here and there.
All these flowered
and fancied days.
I forsake not memories.

The familiar existence . . .
 of no value in itself . . .
 worthless faded stone and glass, useless if not remembered.

No sanctity surpasses silence. Blank and cold,
That consecrated moment hung in space
From deep within grows warm, as I unfold
And touch untainted glory from His face.
A stone, a wall, the bastion clad in power,
Imposes on its passersby a hush.
Stained glass ascends as some celestial tower
By which a silvered brook must solemn rush.
A building: in that reverent, vacant face
I see a faithful mirror - one struck dumb,
Impressed beyond emotion with such grace,
Held fastened still in rapture, wordless, numb.
An edifice: you stand in silent prayer,
To God who speaks a silent witness bear.

- Steve Lang

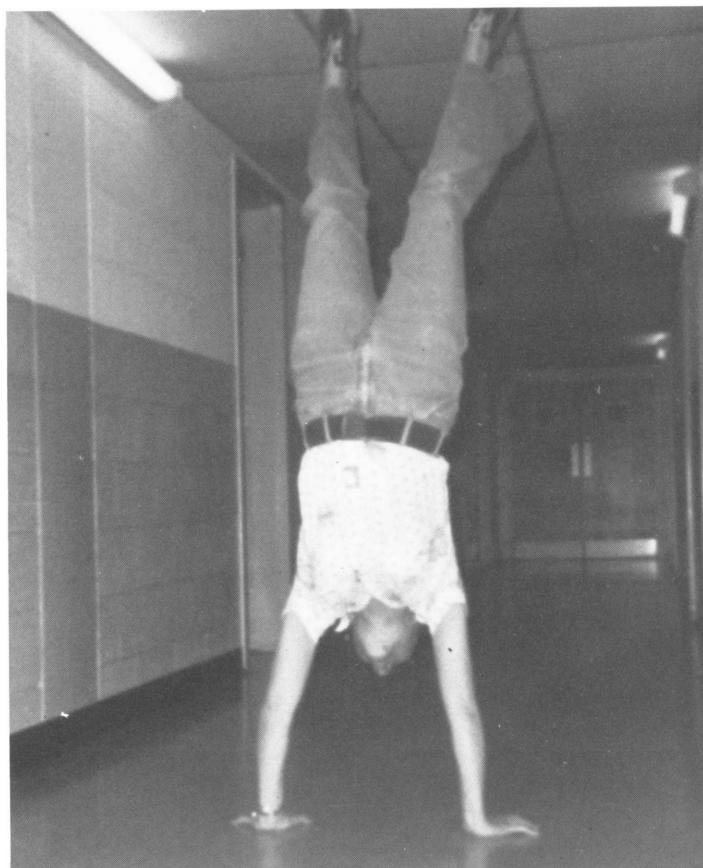

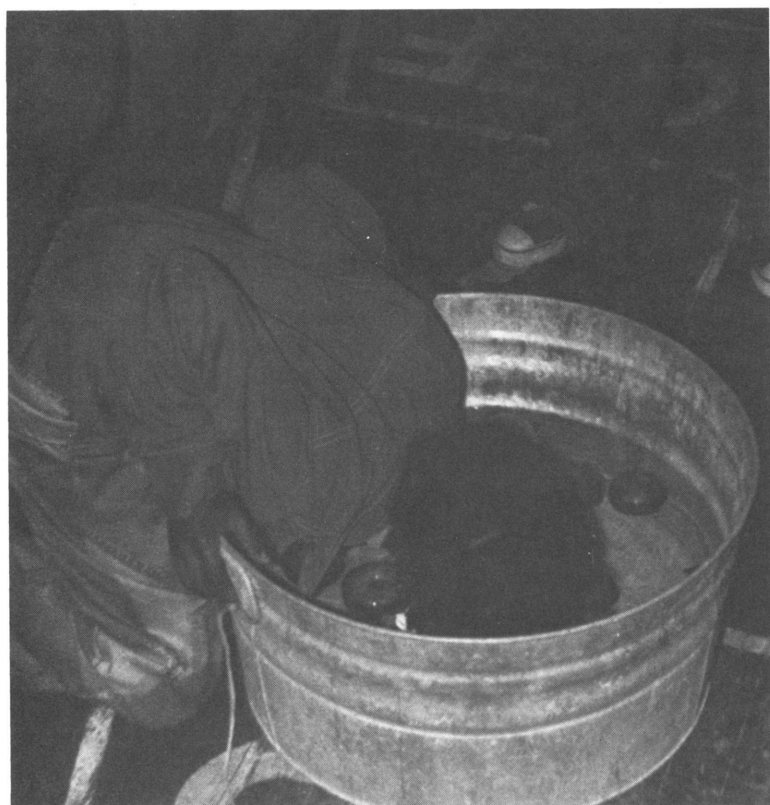

Forever I make my gallant endeavor.
 Whether we meet halfway,
 or whether I walk the extra mile,
 I make you part of today.
 You shine as being yourself, yet you melt into that familiar, familiar existence.

In the crowd . . .
yesterday only a face,
today you have a name,
yet tomorrow I can't forget that mirror that is you.
What you are, what I am,
will soon appear clearly to both of us.

My preservation is my being . . .
my support is my desire to exist . . .
and my existence is so delicate,
so dependent on the familiar.

Yet I have made the unfamiliar and unknown a part of me.
In solitude I wish for company,
even for a stranger.
I bring into myself a part of the new,
and become a part of it.

Whether I consider and reconsider the familiar or focus all my senses on the untrodden path, I learn . . .
I absorb, and create a newness within myself.

In the passing there is only a sense of transience.
Brevity commands me to look closely as I grow.
The world that caught my soul yesterday demands that I turn as it turns.

I stood on the pinnacle of the everlasting,
surveyed my yesterday,
sighed for my today,
and for tomorrow . . .
looked only upward . . .
longing.

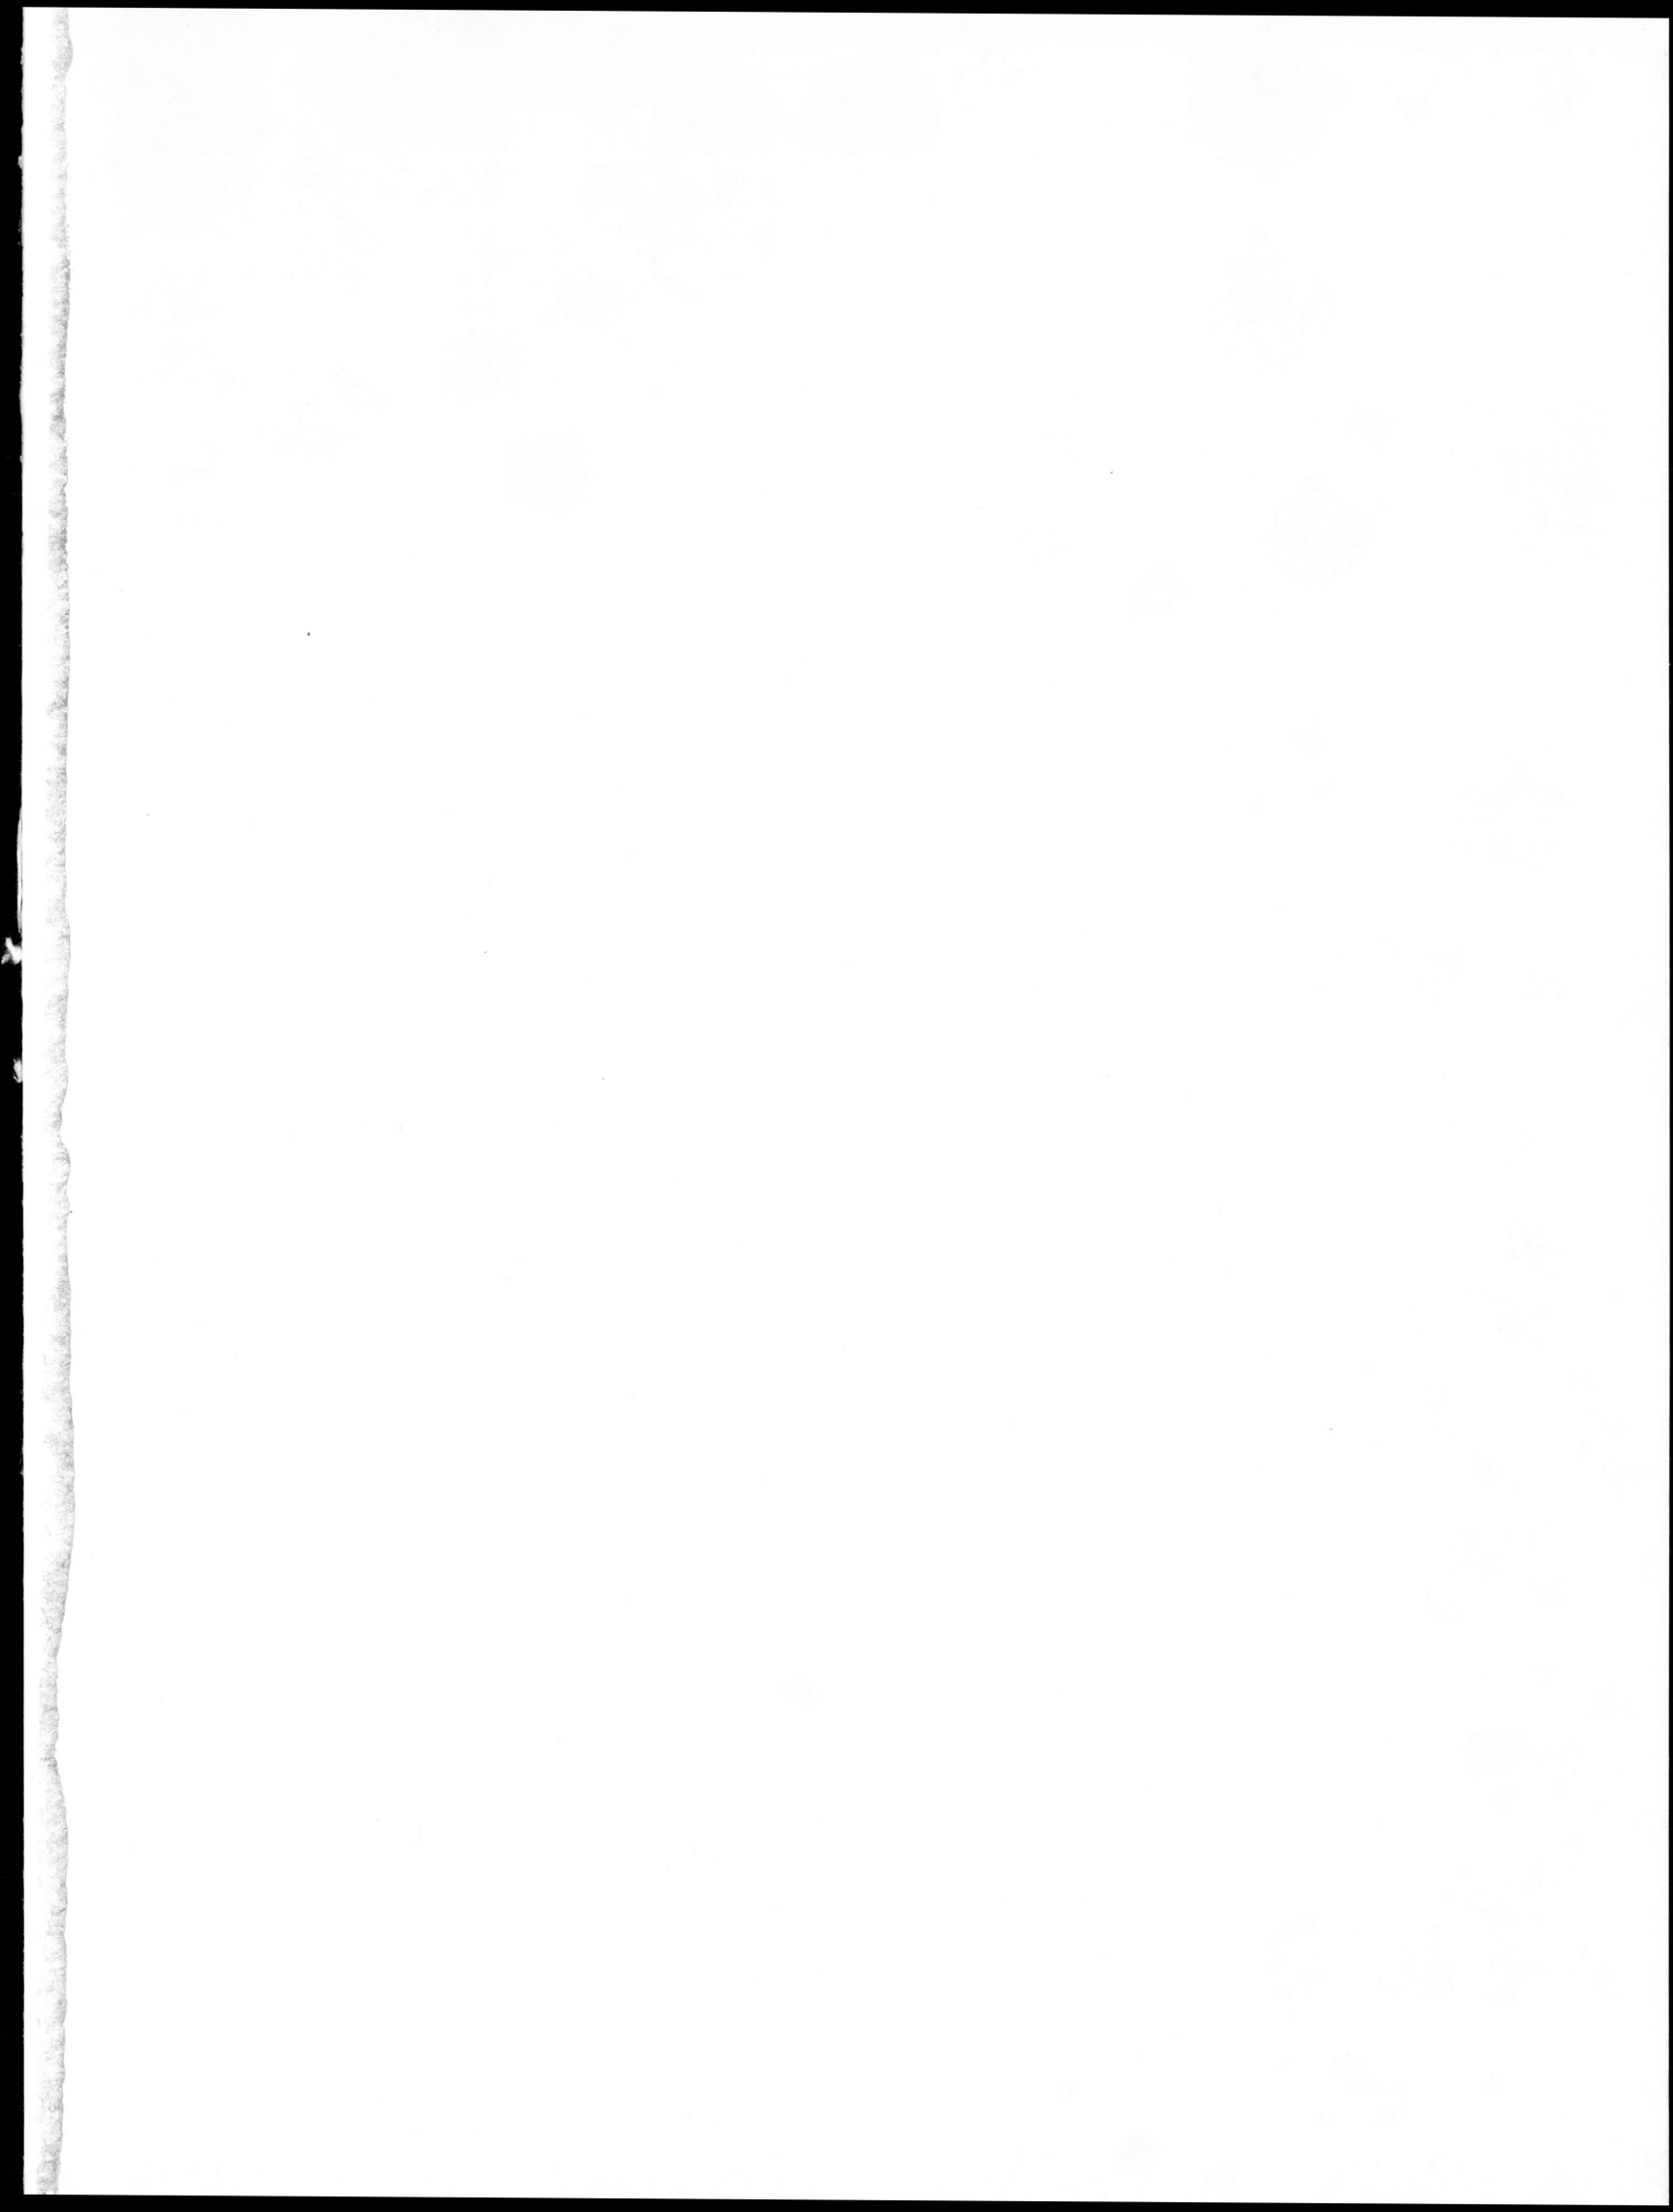

Dedication

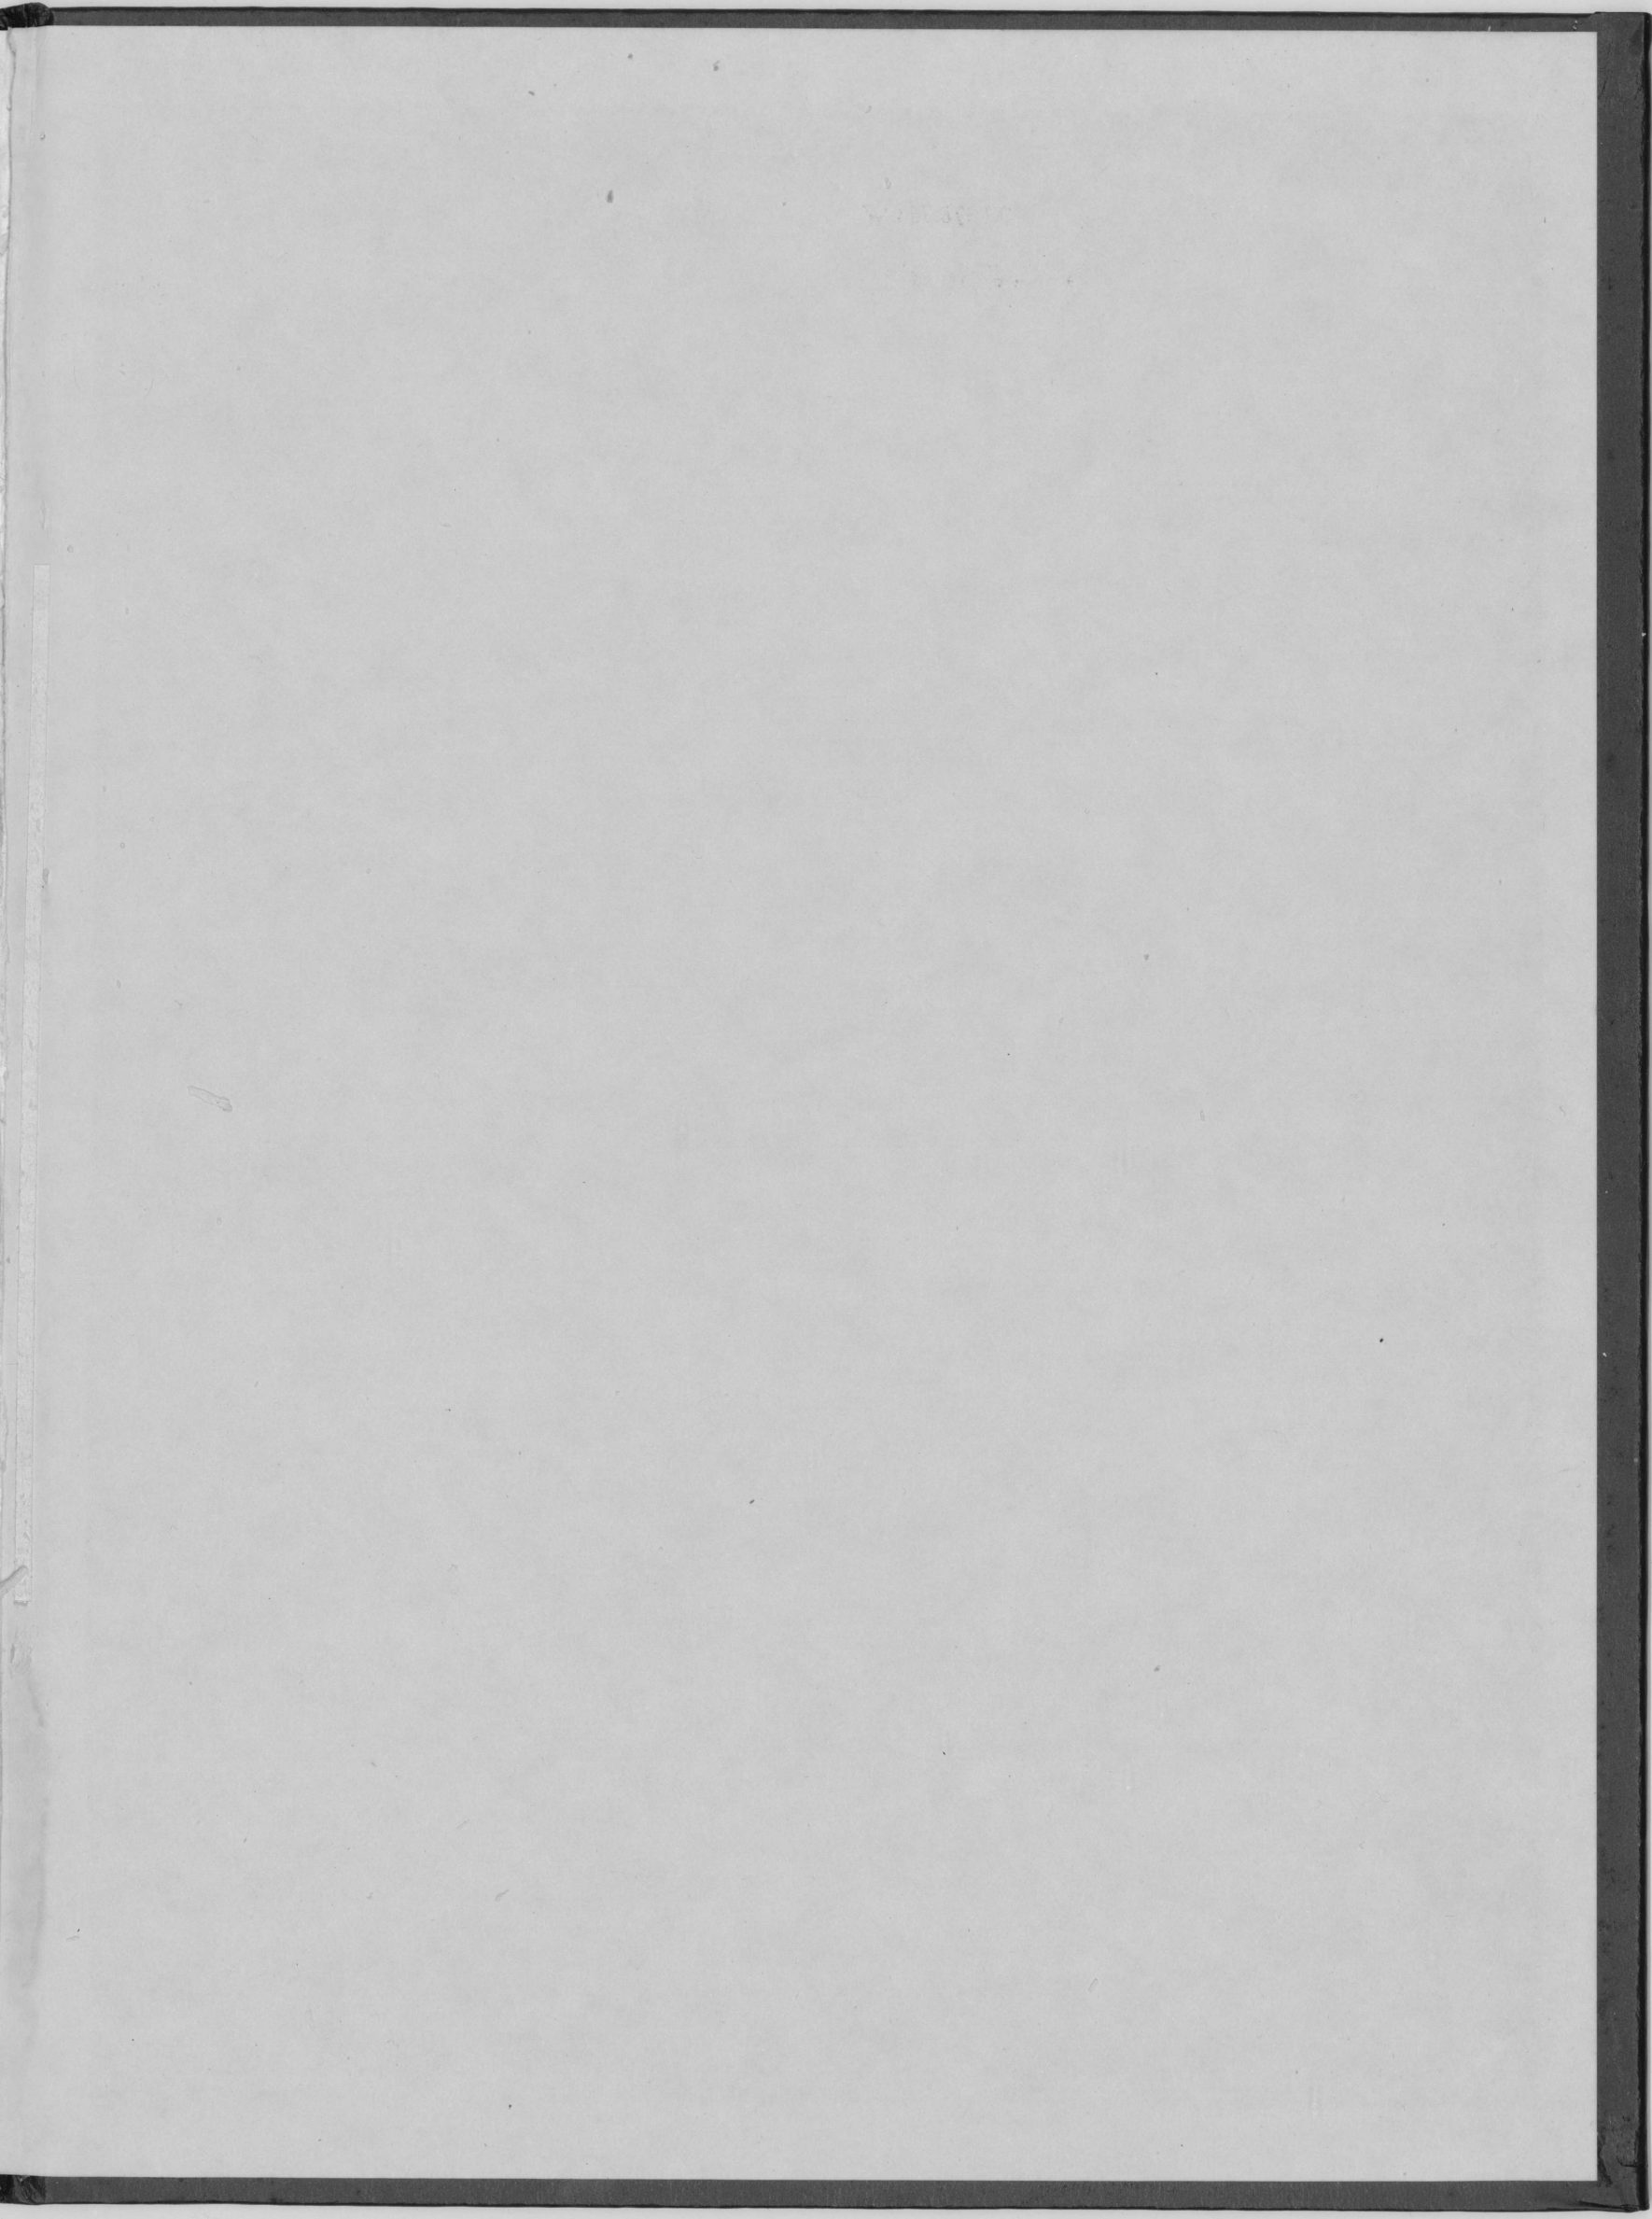

The 1976 Martinaire is dedicated to Mrs. Katherine Luker, our staff dietician for many years. We wish to express our thanks to Mrs. Luker for the patience and good nature she exhibited this past year, which was her last year as head of the Martin College cafeteria.
